

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

THE BLACK BOOKS

VOL. III.

FROM

A.D. 1660 to A.D. 1775.

LINCOLN'S INN.

1899.

PREFACE.

THIS Volume begins with 1660, the year of the Restoration of Charles II. and finishes with the accounts of Mr. John Coxe, junior, Treasurer from Jan. 23, 1775, to Jan. 23, 1776.

The materials are, as before, the Black Books and the Red Books with the addition of the Serle's Court Book, begun by order of the Bench in 1694, "to contain all orders relating to Serle's Court and the admittances thereto," and still continued in relation to New Square, the present name of Serle's Court. p. 188

A MSS. in the Steward's office containing a selection of the Principal Orders down to 1770 is the only previous attempt to carry out what has been done more fully by the present series of volumes. Mr. Henry Gibbs, clerk to Mr. J. Coxe, junior, a Master of the Bench, seems to have extracted and indexed such orders of Council as he thought important, under the supervision of Mr. Coxe, and was rewarded with ten guineas by the Bench. The MSS. is known as Coxe's Digest. p. 444

The arrangement of the Buildings of the Inn will be fully treated of in the next volume, where a detailed and chronological account will be given as complete as the evidence permits.

ADMISSION.

The terms of admission were the subject of several orders, but the terms finally settled on in 1768 were that every person should be admitted by a Benchler without manucaptors, and before entering into commons should enter into a Bond with sufficient security for payment of dues under a penalty of £40; a form of this Bond is inserted in the Minutes. The fee payable on admission in 1775 was £3 3s. 4d. p. 393 p. 432

Many instances occur of admissions ad eundem: the terms generally being that the person admitted should be allowed all privileges and advantages he was justly entitled to at his original Inn of Court. Towards the close of this volume it was the practice for Law Officers who had entered at other Inns to be admitted to the fellowship of Lincoln's Inn. Among them were Sir R. Raymond, afterwards Lord Raymond; Sir Philip Yorke, afterwards
VOL. III. a

Lord Chancellor Hardwicke ; Sir Fletcher Norton, afterwards Speaker of the House of Commons, and William de Grey. The primary cause of their admission in each case appears to have been a desire for Chambers in Lincoln's Inn or in Serle's Court, otherwise New Square ; according to the regulations then in force none but a member of the Society could hold chambers in either of those places.

- Special admissions very much diminish in number. The Reader's
- p. 115 privilege was cut down : no Reader having power to admit specially any person whatsoever a member of the Society under the degree of a Lord, except such person were a Foreign Minister. In compensation for the loss
- p. 115 of his privilege, every Reader, was allowed £30. Subject to the Reader's privilege no person could after Nov. 15, 1677 be specially admitted but by a Special Order of Council.
- p. 330 A Benchers had the liberty or privilege of admitting gratis one son, and no more "which hath always been the usage of this Society."

Dispensation for absence after admission was early granted to a Judge's or a Benchers son only : but in 1680 University students were granted the privilege of remaining at the University for one year after admission : for some reason this privilege was taken away in 1741. Presumably under the former order the University student was excused payment of all dues ; under the latter order he remained liable for dues, including absent Commons, like an ordinary Student.

EXERCISES.

- The Bench in the first year of the Restoration ordered that the exercises
- p. 4 of Moots, Pleadings and Bolts should be performed by the Barristers and Students of the Society as theretofore : and in the next year lamented "that express information hath been made to the Bench (which they are unwilling
- p. 8 to believe) that there is a consent and combination entertained and owned by some at least of the gentlemen of the Bar to abet and justify such defaults as have already been made and to encourage and countenance the like in the future." They appointed a Committee to consider and report, and declared that in the meantime no call either to the Bench or the Bar should be made of any member who had not complied with the ancient Rules.

- The exercises appear to have continued in their former shape up to the
- p. 39 end of this volume. Benchers who were not Double Readers had to
- p. 18 attend exercises as before. Barristers of under three years from the date of their Bar moot were directed to serve vacations and perform Exercises at
- p. 62 Readings as of old ; and those invited to the Bench, or called to the Bar, had to give security for the due performance of their exercises. It was necessary for each student to perform four Bolts and four Moots before call to the Bar.

No Bar moot was allowed to be brought in upon a discontinued exercise ; the notices in the text do not explain what a discontinued exercise was : p. 152 but it may be that the object of the rule was to secure that the moot should have a day to itself and not follow on a previous exercise.

Facilities were given for attendance at moots. Any gentleman of the Inn not in Commons might take a repast in Hall on Bar moot nights, or, when the term began or ended on a Wednesday, on that day only. p. 323

CALL.

The orders affecting the Call of Students to the Bar are numerous, but, each successive order adding to the qualification, it will be sufficient to sum them up and thus show the necessary qualification before the agreement of 1672 :—(I.) The Student had to be of seven years' continuance, i.e., of p. 13 seven years' standing from the date of his admission, and to have kept all exercises and under-Bar vacations and been frequently in Commons during p. 447 the seven years. In practice some part of this period was not unfrequently remitted, as in the case of those intending to practice out of England, with pp. 192, the proviso that they should not practice in England until the seven years 199, 251 had expired. In the case of Cartwright, who intended to practice in p. 142 England, his call was not published until he had performed the two exercises required to make up the number due from him. (II.) Payment of all dues to the Society, including the Preacher's Roll and Pensions, which were not as a rule collected until Call, up to the day of Call. Watts, who had been called p. 126 apparently by an oversight, found his Call "absolutely discharged," as he had not paid the arrears due from him. (III.) Having taken the Sacrament in the Chapel of the Society. Rogers, who was of "full standing p. 153 and had behaved himself nicely," was unable to take the Sacrament in the Chapel, because it was then under repair ; but brought a certificate of reception at St. Dunstan's. He was ordered, before he was published, to bring an affidavit of his having received the Sacrament in that Church. Dunch was called without a certificate, several Masters "having satisfied the p. 173 rest he was a good Protestant." Two were called without a certificate on condition of depositing, the one 40s., and the other £5, with the Chief pp. 199- Butler, as security for their taking the Sacrament on the next Sacrament 244 day in the Chapel. (IV.) Having taken the oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy : these, however, were administered only to such persons as were known Papists or suspected to be Recusants. Newton's call was vacated p. 125 on the ground, amongst others, that he had not taken the oaths. p. 143

- But other, perhaps more grievous, matters were charged against him : that he had presumed to wear a bar gown and to practice as a barrister, though he had not performed his moot : and it was thought right to inform the judges that last went the Northern Circuit (on which apparently he practiced) of the decision of the Bench. (v.) Having taken
- p. 287 chambers in the Inn of the value of £20, or depositing with the Chief
- p. 302 Butler in default of a qualification chamber £20, with £1 for the Treasurer's fee, 10s. for the Butler's fee, and 4s. 6d. for the petition and order, making £21 14s. 6d. (vi.) Having entered into a Bond with two sureties under a
- p. 102 penalty of £40 for payment of commons and dues and performance of vacations and exercises.
- p. 374 These conditions were to some extent modified by a joint agreement of the Four Inns in 1672 to this effect. The standing for the Bar was to be five years from admission ; none to be called under the age of 21 years : 12 terms Commons were to be actually kept : Masters of Arts and Bachelors of Laws in the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, were to be dispensed two years' standing, but not any Commons : no exceptions were to be allowed with regard to Ireland or the West Indies.
- Calls were made in only two terms of the year, Easter and Michaelmas
- p. 383 terms : the call took place in open Council in term time ; three or more Masters of the Bench meeting in the Council Chamber or Buttery * were
- p. 395 made a sufficient Council for calling any gentleman : the quorum was summoned by the Quatuor in Hall on the application of any gentleman
- p. 332 desiring to be called to the Bar. The Masters were attended by the Chief Butler with the Books of Admission, and by the second Butler with the
- p. 393 Book of Exercises. Each Master was entitled to a service of sweetmeats, value 5s. and a bottle of wine from each gentleman.
- p. 315 The cost of call was in one case £35 10s. : in another £34 8s., made up of Absent Commons £18 ; Vacation Commons £6 ; Pensions £1 6s. 8d. ; Call £5 ; Library money 13s. 4d. ; Eating Commons 18s. ; Preacher's Roll, £2 10s.
- p. 315 To these amounts must be added the "treating the Hall," which, it seems, took place on the candidate "moving his Bar moot." Treating was forbidden by No. 16 of the Judges' Orders of 1664, but, as usual in internal affairs, the Judges' Orders seem to have been ignored by the Society. For
- p. 323, 4 not until 1741 "Bar moot treats were taken away," and every person called to the Bar paid £5 to the use of the Library in lieu of the 13s. 4d. formerly paid.

* This was no doubt the old Buttery turned into a withdrawing room for the Lord Chancellor when sitting in the Hall.

BARRISTER.

Besides the many orders dealt with elsewhere directing the Utter Barristers to keep all the Moots and Bolts, wherewith they were charged, and to have chambers in the Inn, there is not much that deserves mention. According to ancient usage "the degree and dignity of Barrister-at-Law" p. 82 is conferred on a member of the Society who was made one of the Prothonotaries of the Court of Common Pleas. Members of the Bar appointed to the dignity of King's or Queen's or Prince's Counsel were, when serving the office of Reader, exempted from the sumptuary regulations p. 41 which bound other Readers, not so honoured. Sir Francis Goodricke, "one of His Majesty's learned Counsel-at-Law and Solicitor-General to his Royal Highness the Duke of York," who entertained the King and Court at dinner in 1672, is the first K.C. recorded. Sir Francis, as the K.C.s who followed him, p. 75 were appointed to that dignity before call to the Bench. During the 120 years covered by this volume, twenty-six barristers only are described as King's or Queen's Counsel. In the minutes the description of K.C. or Q.C. is never attached to the name of any law officer of the Crown, but it is to the name p. 92 of the Queen's Solicitor, and that of the Solicitor-General to the Prince of p. 247 Wales. Possibly this practice was in accordance with some rule of etiquette then in force.

The offences committed by the Bar were not very serious. Doddington is suspended for using opprobrious and misbecoming language to a Bench. p. 28-9 One summoned to the Council is described in the margin of the Book, p. 95 "Tom of Lincoln, a bastard child born in his chamber and ballads of it." One entry shows the Society, as of old, waiving immunity for a member. One Clarke, a barrister, having outrageously beaten the chief Porter, then p. 129 doing the duty of his place, was expelled the Society; the Porter being at liberty to take his best remedy at law for the wrong done him.

THE BENCH.

Four Committees appointed between 1660-1664 to deal with financial matters, had a short existence. But the first mess at the Bench table, consisting of the four senior Benchers who happened to be dining in Hall, under the name of "the Quatuor of the Bench sitting in Mess," developes into a permanent Executive Committee. It is first mentioned by name in this volume, though it may well have been the body that discharged so many functions "at the Board's End," or "the Bench Table," in the previous volumes. It deals with petitions for increase of wages; compels payment of arrears of Commons; calls to account the Reader of Furnival's Inn, who it will be remembered was a Fellow of the Society; is the body to whom notices summoning Councils are communicated ;

 p. 111 directs the disposal of Col. Fairfax's manuscripts ; supplies a quorum for
 p. 152 purposes of Call to the Bar ; deals with the repairs of the Chapel, and the disorder upon the Steward ; and begins in 1739 the system, still in force, of receiving every day from the Butler after the cloth is drawn an account of the wine spent at the Bench and in Hall.

Incidentally we learn two well-established customs of the Bench : the p. 259 one that the Councils were held after dinner in 1720, and that no Benchers were admitted to Council, unless he had previously dined in Hall. The other custom
 p. 330 authorised each Benchers to have one son admitted gratis to the Society.

A very happy expression appears in a minute recording the complaint of Sir Edward Bish that two other Benchers had falsely reported he
 p. 22 had been expelled the House. " The Bench " it states " being tender of the reputation of Sir E. Bish and the other gentleman " proceed to appoint a Committee to examine and report. It would be difficult to find a phrase more neutral and at the same time more satisfactory to the parties concerned.

In the paragraphs dealing with the Readership an account is given of the unwillingness of the Bar to accept invitations to the Bench so long as an acceptance entailed the distasteful performance of the Reader's duties. Mr.
 Stedman, the last Reader, read in the Autumn of 1677 and was Treasurer for 1678, 1679 and 1680. In the last year, the Benchers resolved to read in their turn when there were Readings at the other Inns of Court, under penalty of disbenching on refusal so to read. The probability of the revival of Readings seems to have been considered small, as for the next twenty years no refusal of an invitation to the Bench is recorded. Yet for a reason which is not apparent, possibly from the discontinuance of several Benchers, p. 205 the number of the Bench in 1700 must have fallen very low. For in that year the Bench resolve that after the present Benchers had served all the offices, the Senior Benchers should serve again. The contemplated contingency did not occur, and the next invitation in 1704 is of four Benchers only. In the following years there are some but not many refusals. In 1758, out of twelve invitations, four only accept, and in 1772 fifteen invitations result in six new Benchers.

Mention must now be made of the life and habits of the Bench. It happens that the Treasurer's Rolls contain some of the articles bought for the Bench table beyond the ordinary fare or bought for the comfort of the Bench.
 The first appearance of an article in the Rolls probably marks the date when the fashion of using it reached the class of society in which the Benchers moved. Again a study of the liquor bill will show how the tastes of the Bench changed during the period covered by this volume. Add to this, that the prices affixed enable a comparison to be made between the cost in those days and in the present, and interest may be found in what must be a disconnected statement.

In 1668, White Salts are bought for the Bench Table. In 1673, Tobacco is bought at 3s. and 3s. 6d. a lb., and sugar at 10d. a lb. Mum, said to be a species of fat ale,* is bought at 6d. a quart. Lemons and oranges appear in the Roll for 1677, strawberries and lemons in that of 1693. "Cyder" to the moderate value of 2s. was drunk in 1685. In 1695, 6d. is charged for coffee. Under 1705 is found the first of the series of wines—White Lisbon at 24s. a dozen, followed in 1715 by 2s. 6d. for a bottle of French wine. In 1718 there is a purchase of Rose water and glasses: also of sugar and lemons for the Grace Cup and French wine. There is also an entry of wine "at" the Blue Posts: this particular entry may refer to a potation at the Blue Posts, but later entries occur of wine bought from the Fountain in the Strand, the Anchor, Linwood's, the Rummer in Chancery Lane, Fisher's, the Golden Lyon in Fleet Street, and the Bedford Head. It is pretty evident from this list of names and from a minute which appears hereafter that in these days the Bench kept no cellar, and bought their wine, guided by the experience of some of their members, when and as they wanted it. To return to the Rolls, wax candles at 2s. 6d. a lb. were bought in 1719; chicken and "asparagrase," a cool tankard at 6s. 9d. for the adjourned Council, French white wine at 1s. 3d. a pint, Sack at 1s. 3d., jelly at 6d. a glass, mince pies at 1s., and white wine for the Grace Cup at 1s. 6d. a quart; lemons at 2s. 6d. a dozen, brandy and sugar for punch swell the list for the same year. It will be noticed that this is the first mention of brandy punch. In 1725 Red "Clarrott" is mentioned at 5s. a bottle, and in 1727 4s. is paid to Mr. Hart for fine pale ale. The next year shows more white wine for the Grace Cup and cool tankards for the July adjourned Council, Canary at 1s. 3d. a pint, and the first mention of Port, bought probably at the price set down in 1729, of 1s. 3d. a bottle. An order of the Bench of 1731 marks the introduction of a new drink. "Grace cups in Hall and Tankards at adjourned Councils are for the future to be filled with arrack punch." In 1732, Burgundy at 24s. a dozen, arrack at 4s. a quart, and Sack complete the list. A barrel of Colchester oysters costs in 1735 3s., and in 1740 £1 14s. 8d. is spent on two Westphalian hams. In the next year a Committee on Grievances, extravagant expenses, and other mismanagements, recommend, presumably as an economical reform, "That French wines be drunk in the Hall, Council Chamber, and Buttery only on Grand or holy days for the future at the expense of the House, and that all port wines used in the House for the future be bought at the best hand and of a Merchant, not exceeding one guinea a dozen, which ought to contain three gallons." This order was followed in 1743 by another, for which though no motive is assigned, perhaps one may well be inferred, "That no more punch be henceforth introduced into the Hall or Council Chamber." In 1745 Port for one year at £43 3s. (probably about 41 dozen), one guinea for three gallons of Red Port and 12s. 6d. for Madeira. Four years later two guineas are paid for six gallons of Mountain (said to be a species of Malaga). Coffee and Tea are given at the Bencher's Treat of March 5, 1764, and "shampain" bought at 98s. a dozen makes its first appearance in the Treasurer's Roll for 1775.

p. 392        The two dinners of which details are given were on the occasion of
p. 397 adjourned Councils, and consist of fish, chicken and egg sauce, roast beef, bacon and greens.

OFFICERS OF THE SOCIETY.

During the reigns of Elizabeth, James I. and Charles I., the normal order in which the offices of the Society were held after invitation to the Bench, was Lent Reader, Keeper of the Black Book, Treasurer and then Autumn Reader. All members of the Bench did not in their turn fill all the offices: death, discontinuance or promotion to the degree of Serjeant closed the careers of many members; further the offices were sometimes filled in a different order for reasons which have not been handed down. But the Lent Reader was head of the Society for, as it seems, his year of office; though always a junior, if not the puisne, Bencher. After his year was over, as the last volume shows, he was generally appointed Black Book, and then Treasurer, or, as in the period of this volume, at once Treasurer. The Treasurer in truth had only the precedence of his antiquity at the Bench: he is always so placed in the list of Benchers present at a Council, and did not take the chair at the Council meeting. The offices of Dean of Chapel and Master of the Library were filled by Benchers who had served the office of Treasurer. The Reader or the Treasurer not unfrequently held the office of Marshal in addition to his own. The relative position of the offices may be inferred, from the order in which the elections appear in the Black Books, to be Lent Reader, Autumn Reader, Dean of Chapel, Master of the Library, Treasurer, Black Book, Marshal, Pensioner.

After 1641 the Treasurer and Black Book alone are regularly mentioned, and for the first three years of Charles II's reign are the only offices: the Marshal and Pensioner have disappeared and so had the Steward of the Reader's Dinner, but the fine or composition for the last office was still paid. The Dean of Chapel, Master of the Library and Master of the Walks were appointed for undefined periods and only appear in the lists from time to time. When the volume begins, the Treasurer and Black Book alone appear for three years. From 1663 onwards the Lent and Autumn Readers, or the one of them appointed, are added to the list ; and so long as Readers continued, one of the Readers became Treasurer the year after his Readership. In 1678, Stedman, the last Reader, became Treasurer, and from that date to 1692, the Treasurer and Black Book are again the only officers, with the exception of two Masters of the Walks, one Dean of Chapel and one Master of the Library. The cessation of the Readership left the Society without a Head, the Treasurer being only primus inter pares, and it is interesting to note how gradual was the rise of the Treasurer to the position now occupied by that officer. With 1693 begins a regular series of Black Book, Treasurer, Dean of Chapel, and Master of the Library. The Black Book of one year becomes Treasurer of the next year, and in the two succeeding years Dean of Chapel and Master or Keeper of the Library.

The orderly progress from Black Book upwards was not unfrequently interrupted. It had long been the custom that the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General should be appointed Treasurer for the year after which either of them had attained that dignity, and the officers of the Crown from time to time step in before the other members of the Bench : but the Solicitor-General ceased to have this privilege in 1772 : no preference was given for the future, except in the case of the Attorney-General for the time being. p. 411

The King's Counsel for a time obtained the like privilege. Sir James Butler, K.C., the first K.C. in the History of the Society, was made Treasurer in 1675. Mr. Thomas Jones, lately made one of the King's Counsel, is therefore called to the Bench in 1683. He took his seat at the next Council, and his name is recorded first of all who were present. He is chosen Treasurer for 1685, though obviously junior to most of the Bench. So John Hawles, who was invited to the Bench in 1692, appears as Mr. J. Hawles, Q.C., Treasurer, in 1695. But by 1737, the Bench, the majority of whom must have been stuff gownsmen, carried a resolution that none of the K.C.s who should be called to the Bench thereafter, should be appointed Treasurer, but in the order he had been called to the Bench. In 1754, a batch of five K.C.s were intended to be invited, and the order of 1737 was repealed, the Hon. William Noel, K.C., with two other K.C.s, accepted the invitation of the Bench and was elected Treasurer for 1754. Seven years later the former order was revived, but without prejudice to Charles Ambler, K.C., who was made Treasurer for 1755. The right to the Treasurership then stood on the order of 1772, and the Senior Bencher who had served the other offices was entitled to be Treasurer, subject to the privilege of the Attorney-General.

Returning to the position of the Treasurer on the abolition of the Readerships, Stedman, the last Reader, in 1677 duly put up his coat of arms in the Chapel, and sufficient proof of the position of the Treasurer towards the rest of the Bench, is furnished by the fact that a quarter of a century elapsed before the Bench formally authorised the placing of the arms of the Treasurers, since Stedman, in the East window of the Chapel.

For some years after, his precedence was not settled: for between 1748 and 1762 the Master of the Library is frequently elected before the Treasurer on the election of offices. He did not attain his present position until 1770, when it was ordered that for the future the Treasurer for the time being should take place of all other the Masters of the Bench in the Hall, at Dinner, at the Council and in the Chapel.

p. 388 The Treasurer, the Dean of Chapel and the Keeper of the Black Book appear in 1767 to be entitled to certain fees which were received for them by the Steward and accounted for regularly in Hilary Term.

p. 383 The elections of the Preacher, Chaplain, or any other officer or servant of the Society, were in 1765 ordered to be determined by "Ballotte": Each Benchman was to write the name of his choice on a bit of paper, and hand the paper to the Chairman of the Council.

TREASURER.

p. 18 A Committee of the Treasury appointed in 1662 to relieve the Treasurer of the admissions to Chambers and the management of the trees in the garden, was discharged in 1664, when an "Attendant on the Treasurer," in the person of the late Steward, was appointed as to all such matters of account, reparations, and other affairs of the House, as he should be directed by the Treasurer. This officer, like the Sub-Treasurer in the last volume, is no more heard of. The Treasurer, in 1665, was directed to have all the plate in the possession of the Steward placed in the Hall on the next Grand Day, "for the honour of the Society"; and was enjoined, when Grand Day was past, to keep the House Plate until further order, "as he would keep his own."

p. 241 The Treasurers of 1674 and 1675, two years of trouble, were thanked at the close of their services for their care and prudence in the "managery" of the Treasurer's place to the great advantage of the Society. The Treasurer was forbidden to lay out or expend above £5 without a special order of Council, saving only for "the settled and constant expense." This rule was brought to bear thirty years later on the accounts of a Treasurer, who had bought without leave prints of the Judges to be hung up in the Council Chamber to the amount of £16 5s. ; the Treasurer however was in the end repaid by the Society. p. 330

The Treasurer's Feast had in 1716 apparently ceased to be given. Spencer Cowper, who was Treasurer in that year, commuted his feast by the payment of six guineas, an example followed by seven of the Treasurers who followed him.

A new system of accounts in English by way of Debtor and Creditor was devised in 1730, and ordered to be kept in a Book and not in a Roll as formerly. The Treasurer in 1767 was entitled to fees which were received for him by the Steward, on admission to the Society, on call, and on admission to certain chambers. p. 295

THE READER.

The close of the last volume showed the appointment of Readers who did not read, and the cessation of exercises arising from disinclination of the seniors to read, and of the juniors to attend and study. The wave of reaction, which brought about the Restoration, is traceable in the policy of the Society. Within a year of the Proclamation of Charles II, attempts were made to restore the system of education which "had been interrupted and wholly omitted by the space of nineteen years past." The Judges put forward proposals concerning Readings, which were considered by the Inns of Court, Mr. Prynne and three others being appointed a Committee to meet and confer with the Benchers of the other Inns. The Council of its own motion ordered that Moots, Pleadings and Bolts should be performed as formerly.

A struggle of seventeen years then began between those Benchers who were bent on bringing back the old forms of Education and the rest of the Society. The former, who were in the majority, did their best to secure Readers who would do their duty. While limiting the expenditure of the Reader, they shortened the period of his Reading, thus making the office less burdensome : on the other hand, they fined those who refused to read in their turn, and in extreme cases expelled them from the Bench or the Society. Some of those, thus fined or expelled, were members or Associates of the Bench ; others were Barristers, who from their professional position must have been in frequent contact with the dominant majority : and the minutes show some signs of the hot temper and ill feeling that such strong measures must have aroused.

There were close divisions at the Council, and motions once passed were brought up again and challenged at subsequent meetings, showing the existence of a protesting minority. Barrister after Barrister refused to accept an invitation to the Bench: but the majority continued to have their triumphant way until the minutes of 1677 lack the usual notice of the election of a Reader, and we find the office has ceased to exist.

Mr. J. Howell (who had been called to the Bench in 1659) was the first chosen to hold a Summer Reading, with all the allowances and privileges any previous Summer Reader had enjoyed. He was to read but one week; there were to be two cases argued, one on Monday, the other on Friday: his repetition was to be made and his Reading finished on the Friday. Furthermore, there were to be no suppers, more than ordinary commons, during the whole reading. Mr. Howell failed to read, and Mr. Prynne, at the request of the House, read in the Lent Vacation of 1662. Mr. Howell was again appointed for the summer of 1662, and again failed to read. This second failure of a Reading was taken up seriously by the Council. Mr. Richard Escourt, "though it was his turn to read," was passed over, and Sir Edward Bish, Knight, was chosen Lent Reader, with the privileges of a Double Reader, and summoned, "according to the duty of his place," to be present at the next Grand Day.

Sir Edward Bish was a person of some distinction; he had been made Clarenceux King of Arms in 1661, and offered the Treasurership of 1662. He was, therefore, an unexceptionable man for the post of Reader, and when he appeared at the November Council of 1663 and declared his resolution not to read next Lent, issue seems to have joined without hesitation.

p. 32 "Whereupon," runs the minute, "and upon the date of his refusal and the questions put—first, whether any penalty shall be imposed upon him therefor; secondly, whether any fine; thirdly, whether two hundred pounds; or fourthly, whether one hundred pounds. As to the two first questions, they were carried in the affirmative, the third in the negative, and as to the last question, the Council then being but twelve in number, besides the said Sir Edward Bish himself, they were equally divided. And so nothing resolved; thereupon and the said matter not then further debated or proceeded with." At the next Council Sir Edward Bish was excused from Reading. It was "left to his ingenuity to return his answer next Council what retribution he would be pleased voluntarily to make in respect of the indulgence aforesaid." The end was, that Sir Edward was excused from reading, gave up his Chamber (which he valued at £35 and the Bench relet at £120) and remained a Bencher. The vacancy had to be filled; and after several refusals, Mr. George Day consented to read in the next Lent term; he was rewarded with the option of selling his Chamber and being admitted to the first Bench Chamber that fell vacant. Reader Day preferred to keep his chamber and receive £100 from the Society towards the charges of his Reading.

The Black Books only record the Resolutions passed at Council, but the struggle must have been carried on elsewhere. In 1664 the Judges call for a delegation from the Bench to attend them at Serjeant's Inn and discuss the orders they were about to put out in the course of the year.

Later in the year a Benchers refusing to Read was deprived "of the privilege of a Benchers," and the names of those who had refused to read were entered in the Black Book. Orders were screened "for retrenching and moderating the excessive expences" of Readings. A reference to them will show what inordinate treating custom had imposed on the Readers. A Lent Reader fulfilled his duty, and Francis Butler was chosen Summer Reader in spite of his well known infirmities. Then the Plague began to show itself, and with the consent of the Chancellor and Judges there was no Reading in the Society that autumn, or in the Lent following. p. 41

Francis Butler, who had been chosen Reader, was excused in 1667, and was allowed to continue a Benchers. The term of Reading was shortened by two days and an Autumn Reader was appointed: two Benchers being fined £100 each for refusing to read. In 1668 others were fined £100 and £40, and the order was renewed that any Benchers refusing to read was to lose all benefit and privilege of a Benchers. From 1668 to 1671, two Readers were chosen every year, and in the latter year a custom came in of officially thanking the Reader for his performance. In 1672, Sir Francis Goodricke, being of the King's Counsel, elected to read in Lent. Next year Reed and Page who had failed to read after being chosen, were fined £100 a piece and "suspended the Bench" until payment: subsequently Foxwist, Reed and Page were discharged the Bench for not reading in their turn and were "Associated." The Judges of the House were attended "touching settling Readings," and their advice appears later on. For 1674 Thomas Carpenter was appointed both Lent and Summer Reader, but when the time came he failed to read on either occasion, and was fined £200: he was further disbenched and ordered not to come into Commons or the Hall till further order; his chamber was seized to the use of the House, and a padlock put on his study door. No Lent Reader was appointed for 1675, and a Master invited to the Bench, "declared himself not provided to be a Reader," and therefore refused to come to the Bench. In November, the Judges of the House at a Council Meeting laid down that persons, called to the Bench and refusing, ought to lose and forfeit their Chambers, and be proceeded against "even to expulsion itself." In 1676, Sir James Butler was desired to withdraw his election of being Reader for the next p. 60 p. 103 autumn "by reason of the great necessity of the present repair of the Chapel": and in 1677 it was thought expedient, "in regard that several barristers of antient standing had refused to come to the Bench, and considering how few there were likely to succeed those that lately came up, that there should be but one Reading from thenceforth in every year, and but one Reader chosen." This was in May, 1677; and Mr. James Stedman was chosen the only Reader for the year. He duly read and was thanked for his Reading. By the month of May in the next year the four Inns of

p. 120. Court had agreed in passing rules for carrying out the pleasure of His Majesty, that no Reader, not being of His Majesty's Counsel or Recorder of London, should expend above £300 in his Reading. The rules are sufficiently minute to be interesting. The Bench made the agreement of the Four Inns an order of Council and at that date, presumably, contemplated the appointment of Readers in the future. Yet no subsequent Reader to the Society was appointed. Considering the detail with which proceedings affecting the Readership had been given, it is remarkable that no order for the abolition of the office is recorded. Possibly the party which had hitherto ruled had lost its majority, and did not venture to move the election of a Reader. But whatever the cause, thus disappeared from the Society the name and functions of the Reader, the first in precedence and perhaps the oldest of its officers. With its disappearance ceased the series of Readers' arms in the Chapel, and it was not until 1703 that the arms of the Treasurers were ordered to be put up in the eastern window, beginning with that of the Treasurer after James Stedman, the last Reader. The blank left by the disappearance of the Readership is thus well shown by the fact that five-and-twenty years elapsed before the Treasurer advanced to take the Reader's place and become the acknowledged head of the Society.

THE SERVANTS OF THE SOCIETY.

A list of the Servants with the Salaries paid them in 1767 will be found at p. 390, and the table of precedence of the Household Staff at the same date on p. 389.

The Steward by the same date had become the chief Servant of the Society, and his duties, with those of the Chief Butler (who now took the second place) are set out on pages 388, 9.

The place of "washpot," of considerable antiquity in the Society, had its name changed to that of Fifth Butler.

p. 215 The Chief Porter of Lincoln's Inn in 1703 bore a staff with a silver head on which were engraved the Arms of the House, purchased at a cost of not more than £5. The Head Porter of Serle's Court was presented with a gown and staff similar to that of the Chief Porter of Lincoln's Inn. Each had a long staff for common use in the day time to walk about with.

The Badge Porters appear to have existed before 1660; but in that year several persons were "allowed and continued" Porters to the Society; they wore at their breasts for badges, the arms of Lincoln's Inn, provided by the Steward at a cost of 8s. a badge, unless any porter at his own charge was willing to "enlarge" his badge. They had orders to turn out beggars and idle boys; not to permit persons to cry or expose to sell clothes or goods in the Inn, and to prevent the exercising or showing for sale of horses in the Inn.

FINANCE.

Want of money weighed heavily on the Society for the most part of the period covered by this volume, and the domestic history can only be understood when viewed in connection with the efforts of the Bench to raise the income of the Society to the necessary amount.

The Treasurer's Rolls from 1541-1658 have now been printed in the Appendix, and show the strain put on the Society by the Civil War. The silver of the Inn was sold with the exception of the spoons [Vol. II., p. 364, et seq.], for £132 8s. 4d., and the Society appear to have borrowed from first to last about £2,000, which they were some time in paying. They however, felt themselves at liberty in 1652 to abolish all Rolls but the Preacher's, leaving a yearly income which varied from £700 to £1,000, and yielded a balance at the end of the year. The income was derived from admissions to the Society, fines and admissions to chambers, the Preacher's Roll, pensions, absent commons and composition for absent commons, and such fines as were inflicted on members of the Society. It was obvious the income could be increased by accession of members in larger numbers, who would pay admission fees to the Society, and to chambers, and in time pay or compound for absent commons. It followed that to house more members more buildings must be erected, and that the rule of the Society against underletting and the holding of chambers by strangers and Serjeants must be strictly enforced; thus making room for members of the Inn. This is amply apparent from the minutes. In 1661 an invitation was issued for gentlemen to undertake the erection of new buildings; the great scarcity and want of chambers was regretted; the Serjeants residing in the Inn were politely requested to leave, and all persons who did not hold directly from the Society were publicly warned to "avoid" the chambers of which they were occupiers. In 1662, offers were made of building leases for thirty-one

 p. 20 years, and the orders against lodgers repeated. The Benchers who had discontinued were requested to come into residence and keep commons, and those who would not undertake to read in their turn were desired to surrender their chambers. The Benchers in residence, considering the debts of the House, and the want of money to defray the present and growing
 p. 21 charges of the House, surrendered their claim to Bench Chambers until the House should be out of debt. Three years later, the Rolls, which had been
 p. 44 suspended in 1652 for music, coals, library and gardener, were resumed. In 1665, "the present and pressing necessities of the Society, occasioned principally by the backwardness of those indebted to the House and Steward," compelled the advance by every member, including the Masters, of one Grand Week's Commons at the rate of ten shillings for the Grand Week; and the stress was so great that the advance of 9s. was, a few days later, ordered for the next week. The absent commons were fixed at a fortnight's commons, of which the Grand Week was to be one, making a liability of 19s. per term on every gentleman visus in villâ, which appears to mean in the town of Westminster, London being always spoken of as the City of London. The object was to hit all those who were practicing at Westminster, and yet not in Commons. More will be heard of this practice later on. Then came the Plague. No Councils were held between June 13th, 1665, and February 8th, 1666, and the life of the Inn seems to have revived in May, 1666. Unfortunately, the accounts for 1665 are not in existence, but loans which were repaid in 1667
 p. 50 probably were contracted in the former year. Divers gentlemen, it appears, had chambers, and used them solely to accommodate others, who neither came into Commons, nor paid duties, nor performed exercises, whereby not only the profit, but also the reputation and honor of the Society were lessened; and the Bench ordered that a gentleman must either use his chamber himself or sell the same to such a person as was capable of being admitted according to the Orders of the House. The arrears of chimney money and the Preacher's Roll were directed to be got in.

In 1668, efforts were made to get in the arrears of the Steward's Roll p. 58 and of commons and dues, by seizing and padlocking the chambers of Fellows in arrear. The names of lodgers and dwellers in any chambers who had not been admitted thereto, were sent to the Bench. Benchers, it is to
 p. 68 be regretted, were among those who let or privately disposed of their chambers.

p. 74 The arrears of commons and dues still continued and the Butler was allowed 6d. in the £ for collecting them. His pertinacity seems to have succeeded in making many offer compositions, which the Bench accepted, provided they were paid before the next Council. The sum paid for vacation commons did not defray the cost, and the price was ultimately fixed at 6s. 6d. a week. With the year 1673 the amount of arrears had reached £620, and the Bench took the strong measure of seizing and threatening the sale of the chambers of 26 fellows whose dues were in arrear, and in the following year actually sold the chambers of 20 gentlemen who had not been in Commons or paid their dues for three years. Mr. Aldworth, who was Treasurer from November, 1673, to November, 1674, succeeded in paying off £528 and was formally thanked for his great care and prudence in the "managery" of the Treasurer's place to the great advantage of the House. But some of the gentlemen thus evicted were moved to violence. One Asgill was suspended for his contempt in breaking off the padlock placed on his door. Berrisford's chamber was seized for non-payment of arrears. He was keeper of the Exchequer Records, and notice was given to the Lord Chief Baron, with a request that he would appoint some other place for his Records. Berrisford did not pay, and at the close of the time of grace, the Chief Butler and Porter were ordered forthwith to padlock and seize his Chamber for the use of the Society and to take care that no one broke or entered without leave. If any person should be "so hardy and adventurous," Sir James Butler, a Justice of the Peace for Middlesex, was desired to bind over the offender to appear at the next General Sessions and in the meantime to keep the peace.

Having thus got rid of many lodgers and persons who were useless to the Society, a step was taken to fill the vacant chambers, which has had important results.

In 1674, the Council caused a list to be made out of such of the Barristers as practiced but had no chambers in the House, showing the Courts and Places where they practiced, with the view of presenting it to the Judges of the House at the next Grand Day, in February, 1675, and of requesting them, "as well in their own Courts, as by speaking to the Judges of the other Courts, to use effectual means that those Barristers should return to the House and take chambers there."

The list was prepared and ultimately laid before a Council held in November, 1675, to which had been invited the Lord Privy Seal and three Judges, sometime members of the Society; the words of the minute, so far as they affect the matter in hand, are worthy of being set out at some length. The Council finds that the Society is "in great want of Benchers and Readers and attendance at exercises and coming into Commons and the House, which is occasioned by those of the Bar that keep no Chambers and residence in the House, nor continue in Commons, but practice abroad to the great disparagement of the Profession, and as well of the decay of learning therein, as of the Society itself: For the redress thereof according to the ancient orders and customs for the government of this Society, the Council do all of them unanimously declare: (4) that for such Barristers of this House (whose names are now presented to this Council) that do practice and yet have no chambers or continue in Commons, as they ought to do, that the Bench do forthwith order them to be put into Commons, and also summon them forthwith to attend the Bench to give Bonds to pay their Commons and perform their vacations, and that they with all convenient speed buy themselves chambers, and reside and practice in the House. Otherwise in the case of any defaulter, or any called to the Bench, or that shall be, which shall refuse and not conforme as aforesaid, that their names be given to the Judges to the end they may not practice or be heard at the Barr or in the Circuit, nor have any other privileges of their profession until they conforme."

p. 116        Two years later a similar list was ordered to be made out and, after
p. 118 being scrutinized by seven Masters, was in 1678 presented on Grand Day to the Lord Chief Justice and the other Judges of the House, and by the Master of the Rolls to the Right Hon. the Lord Chancellor with the request "to take such effectual course with the gentlemen mentioned that they return to this House." The subject is not again mentioned until 1690, when the Council advocate joint action by the Four Inns "for promoting keeping up of Commons and for the practicing Barristers to have chambers in their respective Societies." It does not appear that joint action was taken: the tone of the minute is far removed from the wail of that of November, 1675, and perhaps joint action was unnecessary. In Lincoln's Inn, at any rate, the Readership had come to an end, and the Bar were no longer liable to have their chambers seized for refusing to read. It is also reasonable to suppose that the declaration made by the Privy Seal and the three Judges was in harmony with the feelings of the rest of the Judicial body, and that pressure, direct or indirect, was brought to bear on the Bar generally. It is significant that the Society, which continued in want of money for fifteen years afterwards should not have availed itself of the powers offered by the Judges, if there had been an appreciable number of delinquents. On the whole we may conclude that the tendency to dispersion was checked, and the private life of the Bar concentrated in the Inns of Court.

These worthies built better than they knew. They had in view only the prosperity of the Society, but the association thus enforced on the members of the profession developed and fostered special habits of mind and action which are still the heritage of their successors. The other Bars of this Kingdom have attained excellence without altogether similar advantages. To what extent these habits can be created under circumstances not quite similar can only be stated by those familiar with the past and present of the Scotch and Irish Bars; but to the writer, it seems that the Bar of England owes much of its position, its corporate spirit and its code of morality and practice to the policy laid down in the Declaration of November, 1675.

The principle that every member should have a chamber in the Inn was later on enforced by making possession of a chamber or part of a chamber of the value of £20 or the deposit of £20, in the hands of the Treasurer, a condition precedent to Call to the Bar. p. 287

Returning to 1676, the practice of sub-letting chambers was again declared to entail forfeiture and seizure of the chambers so let out; every Fellow visus in villa, whether he had a chamber or not, was taxed 2s. 6d. a term for the Preacher, and was compelled to be in Commons as he that had a chamber. An example is made of a Benchers and an Associate who had no chambers, lodged in their sons' chambers, and were in arrear on the Preacher's Roll. p. 105 p. 118 p. 121

The Bench now hit upon another way of increasing the return for admissions to Chambers. Under the Orders of 1664, persons who did not receive the Communion in the Society were liable to expulsion, and the Treasurer, and as many Benchers as pleased, were directed to search the House for Popish Recusants, either by virtue of those Orders or the Acts enforcing the oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy. The next Council, "taking notice of the advantage accruing to the Society by the late search in the Chambers of the Society whereby several Popish Recusants were discovered," ordered that the like searches be repeated. In the Spring of the next year, the House of Lords ordered the Treasurers of the Inns of Court to return a list of the Papists, and to expel all Recusants. The return was made and showed six Papists still remaining on April 3, 1679 in Lincoln's Inn. p. 446 p. 123 p. 125 p. 454

In the next year, it seems probable that complaints had been made to the Bench of the payments for Vacation Commons, and the form of the minute suggests that feelings ran high both above and below the Bar. It runs "That it is destructive to the Society to alter the method of paying for Vacation Commons." This was passed on the 26th June (probably a Saturday, the Council day); on the Monday following disorders were committed in Hall; and the Bench summoned the Lord Privy Seal and the Master of the Rolls and several of the Judges "to give advice for composing and settling the Rules of the House." At the Council meeting, "after great debate nothing p. 130 p. 131 was concluded," but to meet again. At the next Council the rioters apologised and as no punishment was given, it may be supposed that the Bench were not unanimous on the merits of the order about Vacation Commons.

- p. 159 In 1687, the Chapel had been repaired mainly by borrowed money and pressure was used to collect the arrears of the Preacher's Roll and the absent Commons. Nine gentlemen who lodged in other gentlemen's Chambers
 p. 160 were summoned before the Council, and Middleton is summoned for letting out his Chamber at a yearly rent. In this year a practice began of
 p. 159 consolidating each chamber: that is of allowing each member to have the whole of a chamber to himself, probably at an increase of fine. The Masters of the Bench who had not read and were in possession of Bench Chambers were ordered to lend 100 marks, which was to be repaid when the House got out of debt or they read, which ever happened first.

- p. 163 These measures roused dissatisfaction in the Barristers and Students, and probably in some of the Bench. On one Thursday in May, 1688, a paper was delivered to the Benchers in Hall by several gentlemen of the Society, desiring liberty to inspect the accounts of the House, and requesting an answer to the matters contained in the paper. The Bench in Council refused to give an answer in writing to the paper, "having never been in precedent"; but, desiring to give all reasonable satisfaction to the gentlemen, appointed four Masters of the Bench to meet four of the Bar and four under the Bar, and to go into the accounts with them. The petitioners wished to examine the Black Books and the accounts of absent Commons due from any member of the Society. The Bench conceded examination of the accounts, and desired the Black Book Keeper to attend the Committee, with instructions to their delegates to satisfy the petitioners of the matters contained in the paper, and added that as "the exigencies of the House for defraying the debts thereof are pressing," the Committee should set to work without delay, and, if possible, make an end before the last day of term. In July, the gentlemen were reported to the Council as "insisting upon several orders made touching Bench Chambers and several other things." The Bench adjourned the Council of July without decision; the long vacation came on; William of Orange landed at Torbay in November, and in the excitement of the Revolution no more was heard of the petition.

- p. 181 But the income of the Society did not improve: and though in 1692 the Council considered "building on the dead wall next Chancery Lane or of any other way to put the House out of debt," no relief followed, and the accounts show continual borrowings by the Bench. In 1700, the situation must have appeared desperate. There was a "slender" appearance of Barristers as well as Students in Commons every Term ; several gentlemen had run into arrear for vast sums for absent commons ; the charges for servants' wages and the dearness of provisions had loaded the Society with debt ; and members were totally deserting Commons in the hope of abatement for what they never had : the Council therefore ordered that no abatement be made of Vacation or absent Commons in the future. p. 206

In 1703 the Treasurer brought forward a list of debts to the Society for vacation and absent Commons and Preacher's Roll, amounting to above £1,800, and in 1706 the Society owed £1,200. From that date the fortunes of the Society began to mend, because each head of income began to yield a better return. The fines on admissions to chambers and the payments for absent Commons both largely increased. Probably much of the arrears was got in, and the compositions for absent commons were paid with greater regularity. Borrowing ceased to appear in the accounts, and in 1714 bonds to the amount of £1,000 were paid off. Five years later the Society had a surplus which was profitably invested in South Sea Bonds. From that time to the close of this volume the Society were always in prosperous circumstances, and the figures in 1659 of Gross Receipts £1,123, and Gross Payments £749, were represented in 1773 by Receipts £3,610 and Payments £3,474. p. 217

THE CHAPEL.

A Cross forming part of the Chapel was taken down in 1646. Whether this was an outburst of Puritan feeling, or because the cross had decayed does not appear. Certainly in 1671 (forty-eight years after its erection), the Chapel had begun to show signs of decay. In 1680, " it was ruinous and decayed and in the judgment of judicious workmen, architects and others in a dangerous condition, so that some of the Society and other persons of quality, formerly resorting thereto, are deterred from coming and refrain to repair thereto." An order was made to repair it with all convenient speed. From want of funds nothing was done until 1684, when the walls and roof were ordered to be forthwith repaired. In the next year, Mr. Christopher Wren (then a member of the Society) was invited to peruse draughts of articles with the freemason and the bricklayer ; and in June the Chapel was shored up at a cost of £10. The Society borrowed in that year to pay £600 to the mason and £460 to the bricklayer. In 1730 the windows were taken down, cleaned, new leaded, and "renailed"; the Creed, the Commandments, and the Lord's Prayer were put up on the East wall and the East window repaired. In 1755 the windows were again taken down and repaired and the Chapel was p. 130

"beautified." Two years afterwards the roof was covered with copper at a cost of £213 11s., and in 1760 the Staircase was ornamented with a Tuscan block "cornish."

The Treasurer's Roll for the year ending November, 1661, shows an entry of £28 16s. 1d. for vestments at the feast of All Saints. Unless these were for use in the Chapel, it is hard to explain the expenditure of so large a sum ; but in 1663, on the passing of the Act of Uniformity, surplices and hoods were provided for the Preacher and Chaplain. In 1676 Tollemache Duke
 p. 180 presented two silver candlesticks, now gilt and used in the Chapel. Mr. Long
 p. 188 and his widow, Mrs. Dionesse Long, after Long's death, presented velvet cloths with gold fringes for the pulpit and communion table.

In 1700 a proposal by Mr. Cavendish Weedon to set up an organ loft was rejected ; but another proposal by him was approved, "to admit into use in the Chapel, the new version of the Psalms by Mr. Tate, His Majesty's Poet Laureate, and the Rev. Mr. Brady, one of H.M.'s Chaplains-in-Ordinary, Mr. Weedon furnishing at his own charge two copies for each of the Bench and Bar Seats." Another proposal by Mr. Weedon to erect an organ loft in the West End of the Chapel was declined in 1707 ; and a like fate befel the offer of Mr. Fellows to erect an organ loft and give an organ in 1721.

The "Uppermost" seats were those nearest the Communion Table. Two of these, that is, the two of the first row, were reserved for the Judges, Serjeants, and King's Counsel ; the next three rows for the Benchers, and the two last rows for the Barristers ; no other allotment was made. During the plague of 1665, none but persons of quality were admitted to the Chapel ; but usually, "ordinary persons or tradesmen" might be let into the pews after the first lesson had begun. In 1717, the wives of the Benchers complained that the seats were not convenient, i.e., for the hooped petticoats in use ; but by 1730 the Chapel had become attractive to the ladies, for the Bench were compelled to order that ladies should not be admitted to the seats below the pulpit.

The Preachers of the Society must now be mentioned. Greenfield, who was Preacher at the close of the last volume, resigned in 1663 and was followed by the "Rev. John Tilletson." This divine became Dean of Canterbury in 1672, and continued to hold the Preachership and the Deanery
 p. 34 until he was made Archbishop of Canterbury in 1691. The terms of his service, which, with one modification, were those of all his successors in this volume, were £100 a year, £24 more for vacation Commons, Commons for himself and man in term time, and a chamber : he was to preach twice every Lord's Day in term time and next before and next after every term and in

Reading time, and once every Lord's Day in Vacation and as other occasion should require : to administer the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper with the Chaplain in every term and vacation : to reside constantly in the Society, and not absent himself without leave : this last clause was modified in 1670, and leave was given him to be absent, taking care his place was well supplied. He held the Preachership during the Great Plague of 1665, and was given with the Chaplain leave of absence from June 13, 1665 to the first Sunday in Easter Term, 1686. It is fair to add that the House was practically shut up during that period. On his resignation, a claim was put forward by several Barristers and Students "pretending right to the election of a Preacher" ; but the Bench, on a search of the Book of Orders, resolved that the right of election of a Preacher was and always had been in the Masters of the Bench only, and not in the gentlemen of the Society under the Bench. "Dr. Maynard" was the next Preacher. He resigned in 1699 and was presented with a piece of Plate, which he bequeathed to Magdalen College, Oxford. He was followed by "Francis Gastrell, B.D." to whom also a piece of plate was presented on his being made Bishop of Chester in 1714. "Dr. Lupton," his successor, was followed by the "Rev. Mr. Thomas Herring, B.D.," who resigned after becoming Dean of Rochester in 1732. His successors were "Dr. Crank, and, Dr. Watts." Next came the "Rev. William Warburton, M.A.," who was Preacher from 1746 to 1761, when he was made Bishop of Gloucester and resigned. In 1768 he founded a Lecture in the form of sermons "for proving the truth of the Christian Religion from the completion of those prophecies in the Old and New Testaments which relate to the Christian Church, especially to the apostacy of the Church of Rome," to be preached on three named Sunday mornings in the Lincoln's Inn Chapel. These are still continued under the name of the Warburtonian Lectures. Dr. Warburton was succeeded by Dr. Ashton, who was followed by the "Rev. Dr. Hurd," shortly after made Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry.

The remuneration of the Chaplain, or Reader or Lecturer in Divinity, was 30s. a week, commons in term and vacation and a chamber. His duties were (in 1664) to read prayers twice every day in term and in vacation, if commons held ; if commons did not hold, twice every Lord's Day, Wednesdays and Fridays in every week in term and constant preaching once every Lord's Day in vacation. To this was added, in 1757, that he should perform his duty personally except for two months in the "Long Vacation." He was to pay the Society all moneys received for marriages and burials. Of the Chaplains, the only one necessary to mention is Mr. Browne, who was called upon to answer a complaint relating to a

- p. 263 clandestine marriage in the Chapel. The sequel was an order that the Chaplain should give the Dean of the Chapel a note of the Christian and Surnames of all persons married by him, with their additions; these particulars were to be entered in a book. This was in 1711; but the earliest extant Register begins in May, 1695.

Another officer connected with the Chapel was the person who set or began the Psalm, also called "the Psalm-raiser." The Chaplain and one of the Butlers are mentioned as holding this office. It was filled in 1715 by Henry Carey, author of "Sally in our Alley," and reputed author of "God Save the Queen." He held it only two years, and was summarily dismissed, for reasons which he relates in an interesting letter to the Earl of Oxford, set out in the Appendix p. 468.

- p. 324 The Chapel Clerk was appointed in 1741 at a salary of £5 a year and a gown when necessary. His duties were to attend the Chapel every Sunday, and at the monthly sermons, and all Holy and Saints' Days, and all Epistle and Gospel Days; and to be present at all marriages and funerals. The
- p. 179 monthly sermons appear to have been preached on the monthly fast days, and had their origin in the will of Henry Colfer (Vol. ii., p. 427), by which a sum of 20 shillings was left for ever for a lecture sermon to be preached in Lincoln's Inn Chapel by "some suffering, yet sound and learned Divine" on one Wednesday in every month throughout every year for ever.

The Dean of the Chapel was appointed from time to time by the Bench out of their number as the office was vacated.

- p. 309 The hours of service were on Sunday morning not before 10.30 a.m., and on Sacrament Sunday afternoons at 3.30 p.m.: on week days the afternoon prayers were held at times, varying from 2.30 p.m. to 5 p.m., as successive Councils thought fit to order. The order for prayers at 4 p.m. provides that no candles be used at these times, save at the Desk.

- p. 228 Collections were made on Sacrament Sundays, which were the first
- p. 266 Sunday in each month. The Chaplain made a note of the amount of the collection, and paid it to the Butler. A distribution was made four times a year among persons nominated by the Benchers and Associates. The servants of the Society were excluded from the number of possible recipients.

- p. 328 Marriages and Christenings, but not Churchings, were allowed to be performed in the Chapel.

- p. 266 The Servants of the Society in 1723 were wont in company with gentlemen's servants to leave the Chapel in the time of Divine Service, send for drink and behave themselves "disorderly." Thereupon an order was made of which the effect may still be seen on any Sunday morning: the two Chief Porters were to attend in their proper habits with their Porters' Staves all the time of Divine Service, and two Badge Porters were to attend at the Chapel stairs to keep away beggars and prevent disorderly practices.

The two earliest coats of arms in the Chapel at the present time appear to be those of Thomas Spencer, who purchased discharge from Reading in 1586, and of Anthony Irby, Autumn Reader in 1590. These are the first of a series of Readers, ending with James Stedman, the last of the Readers of the Society, who read in the Autumn of 1677. In the present West windows, besides the arms of the Readers, are to be found those of a few Benchers of later date. But in the East windows are found the arms of the Treasurers from 1680 to the present time. The arms of Luke Astry, the first of the series, were put up in 1703, pursuant to an order that the coats of arms of every Treasurer since the last Reader should be put up in the East window and in no other place. James Stedman, after putting up his arms as Reader, served as Treasurer for three years, and Luke Astry, having in 1680 succeeded him as Treasurer, fitly heads the series. p. 213

An entry in the Treasurer's Roll for 1718-19 of a payment of 5s. to the silversmith for studs and fastening the silver on the Common Prayer Book "that lies on the Communion Table," refers to the Prayer Book now exhibited in the Library.

Burials continued to take place in the ground under the Chapel of persons who died in the service of the Society and of Fellows who had been in Commons within 12 months of their death. Armorial bearings were put up on the walls over some of the graves. The charge for opening the grave was £1. p. 137 p. 294

The arches under the Chapel became the resort after sunset of bad characters of both sexes, who gave much trouble to the Society. Women left children whom they could not support. The entry in the Treasurer's Roll of 1731-2 "2s. 6d. to a woman that kept a child that was dropped under the Chapel" is the first of many to the like effect; finishing with that, on the last page of this volume, of the purchase of a pair of stays for George Lincoln, a pair of shoes and three frocks and payments for his board at 4s. a week, and of a payment to the apothecaries for the cure of the foundling boy, George Lincoln.

THE HALL.

Externally the Hall remained unaltered throughout this period, except that two buttresses on the west side were worked up to support the roof, and an arch turned on each side of the passage door. The turret and roof were p. 303 repaired in 1770, and a stone was inserted with the date and the Treasurer's initials.

p. 305 Internally, some alterations were made. Folding doors (? screens with leaves) were made to fit the arches into the Hall: the interior and doors
p. 140 were gilded at a cost of £11; and the arms of distinguished members were set up. It was the courteous practice of the Bench to obtain the permission of the member whom they wished to honour, before setting up his arms.

p. 148 In 1614 a concession was made to a generation not so hardy as their predecessors. "Whereas," says the minute, "heretofore fires have not been allowed at Commons in the term of St. Michael, until the eve of All Saints: and whereas, very few of the gentlemen do come into Commons the beginning of the said term, the season being then very cold and fires needful," fires should be forthwith made at meals in the Hall in that and every succeeding Michaelmas term, so long as Commons continued. This minute is dated at a Council held October 25, at which time it would seem
p. 317 Term at that date had begun. The fire was in the centre of the Hall, for with a view to economy in using coal the Bench in 1738 considered "of making one or more chimnies in the Hall for coal fires," and in due course
p. 327 provided sea coal for the Hall and Buttery.

The allowance in 1684 of four clean table cloths a week, instead of three as theretofore, was advanced in 1717 to clean linen throughout the Hall on every day in term time and on every day to the Bench table. Hollow trenchers were in use at the Reader's Dinner in 1665, and the
p. 282 Treasurer buys round and square trenchers in 1727. The use of gowns was made imperative by the Judges' Orders of 1666: and in addition the Bench in
p. 59 1668 put out a most stringent edict: "Whereas, by the Constitutions and Orders of this Society, no Member ought to come into the Hall at the time of dinner, supper, or exercise, without a gown: and for offending therein divers persons in former times have been expelled this House: and yet some few young gentlemen (being ignorant hereof) have of late, in the vacation time, adventured to come into the Hall with coats and swords, without their gowns, to the great scandal and subversion of the government of this Society," offenders were to lose a week's Commons, and not to be called to the Bar or allowed to sell their Chamber until payment. As may be inferred from the style, this order was composed to be screened in the Hall. The penalty of 8s. 6d. (the price of a week's Commons in term) for not wearing a gown in Hall during vacation was re-affirmed in 1677. Later on a state of things is shown,
p. 249 not unfamiliar to Members of the Universities. "Notice having been taken that several gentlemen appear in Hall either without gowns, or with only pieces of gowns, contrary to the known Rules of the Society, no gentlemen shall in future appear but in "a decent gown." Again in 1732 no gentleman was allowed to come into Hall, but "in his proper gown" nor "come in nor go out with his hat on." Perhaps the proper gown has reference to a practice pursued in 1737 by Moloney "who has frequently appeared in the Hall in a Bar Gown, though on enquiry it does not appear to the Council that he was p. 251 ever called to the Bar." Moloney was summoned before the Council, but the result is not stated. On two occasions Members of the Bar left Hall before Grace had been said and were reprehended.

The taking or sending Commons out of Hall continued to be strictly forbidden and constantly done. The Clerks of the Benchers ceased to have Commons allowed them in 1737.

The only recorded offence in Hall is that of a Barrister who, contrary p. 256 to the Order brought a dog into Hall at dinnertime. When the Porter attempted to remove the dog, the Barrister offered to fling a pot at the Porter's head and threatened to knock him down: "whereby the Porter was intimidated and unable to execute the order."

The Hall was used for divine service while the Chapel was being repaired. It was also used as a Court of Justice for many years. In 1717, p. 251 Sir J. Jekyll, M.R., at the invitation of the Bench sat in the Hall, while the Rolls House was being rebuilt, the Society spending £1 2s. 6d. in a green cloth to cover the Bench while he sat. Sixteen years later, also at the p. 305 invitation of the Bench, Lord Talbot, then Chancellor, sat in the Hall, at a p. 312 cost to the Society of £1 6s. for candles had in court. Lord Hardwicke* who succeeded him held his first sitting there, as Chancellor, in 1736-7. Incidentally we learn that his sitting produced in 1740 profits, which "except the Hat money," the Porter was bidden to share with the Pannyerman. In 1770 the p. 321 Chancellor of the day still held his Court in the Hall, and the Buttery, which in 1739 had been fitted up for the then Chancellor, had gained the more honourable name of the Withdrawing Room.

The Serjeants' Feast of 1688 was held in the Hall, as was that of 1756. On the latter occasion members of the Society were of the number of newly-appointed Serjeants.

When any member of the Society was presented with the Coif, he was p. 373 received by the Masters of the Bench in the Council Chamber, from which he proceeded to the Hall where the members of the Society awaited him, p. 392 gowned and ready to hear the public speeches delivered by a Bencher on p. 409 behalf of the Society and by the outgoing Serjeant.

LIBRARY.

p. 77        The fund for the general support of the Library in 1672 appears to have
 p. 111 been the 13s. 4d. paid with that object on Call : and the fines for failures of
 p. 85 exercises at Moots and Bolts of 20s. for a Benchler, 13s. 4d. for a Barrister, 6s. 8d. for Gentlemen under the bar. When the Bar Moots were suppressed
 p. 324 in 1741 the payment on Call was raised from 13s. 4d. to £5. The Keeper of Library was a Benchler and appointed, it would seem, for indefinite periods.
       The under Library Keeper attended in 1736, through the whole year from p. 345 nine to one in the forenoon, and from Ladyday to Michaelmas from four to
 p. 378 seven in the afternoon : he was also the 2nd Butler and received 6d. a term from every member attending the Library, if he could get it. The locks and keys of the Library were frequently altered ; probably this was for greater security, as the Library contained most of the valuable property of the p. 114 Society (except the plate) : the Hale Manuscripts which were kept in
 p. 110 "archives" or presses specially erected for them ; the Fairfax Manuscripts also a bequest by a member of the Society, of which two only now can p. 231 be identified : the Books bought with the £100 left to the use of the p. 255 Society by Sir John Franklyn ; a picture of L.C.J. Rainsford, also a bequest ; and the chest of evidences or title deeds of the property of the Society.

      It was decided by the Bench to lay out the £50 or £100 left by Mr. Franklyn, (both sums are mentioned) on books of the Civil Canon
 p. 234 and Feudal Law. The Master of the Library, Crawford, happened to be a Scotchman, and made application "to the most learned Civilian, Mr. Alex. Cunningham (Professor of Civil Law in the University of Edinburgh) for his recommendation of a useful collection of the Books above mentioned," and received a catalogue on which the Bench acted. Lady Franklyn obtained leave, to hang up an inscription in memory of her husband, "a great benefactor to the Society." A portrait of Sir J. Franklin, is in the Benchers' Room and it seems possible (in the absence of any evidence how this came into the Society's possession) that Lady Franklyn presented it in lieu of the inscription above mentioned.

p. 265        The sale is recorded of a duplicate copy of Rymer's Fœdera, by consent of the donor, for £105, in 1722. The globes in the Library were repaired
 p. 289 in 1729. The keeper was authorised to buy the Statutes as they came out, p. 296 and all law Books licensed by the Judges. A catalogue was made of the p. 334 Library by Mr. Bellamy, a member of the Society, in 1744, and another of
 p. 343 the Manuscripts in 1749.

CHAMBERS.

The description given in the Introduction to Vol. II, p. xv, of the mode in which the chambers were used and occupied, is confirmed by the petition of William Dunch to the Bench. From this it is clear that the lobby or anteroom between the studies was used by the clerks of the co-tenants, each clerk having a table and stool, and being entitled to the access of light from one of the windows in the wainscotting. p. 234 p. 37

The custom, however, was coming in of the whole chamber being taken or bought by one man, and the chamber being thus, as the phrase went, "consolidated." The first instance was in 1670, and the example once set was quickly followed. The admission to a whole chamber cost £130, £350, £450, as the case might be; a fine had to be paid for each chamber, i.e., half chamber so consolidated. p. 67 p. 290 p. 344 p. 285

In 1763 it seems to have occurred to the Bench that it would be more profitable to let chambers at a yearly rent instead of, as theretofore, admitting a tenant for life on payment of a sum down. An estimate was obtained of the probable yearly rental obtainable from the ground and first floors in each of the several staircases in Old Buildings: and in 1775 a resolution was come to that for the future the chambers which fell into the Society should be let, not for lives, but from year to year at a rack rent.

Tenants were still restrained from breaking out windows without leave. The keeping of dogs in chambers was forbidden in 1775. The name of Mr. John Stone must be rescued from oblivion. The Bench give him leave in 1771 at his own expense to make (what is the first mentioned) water closet, and lay on New River water for the same, and to make a "Buzaguloe Stove," p. 408
It is to be regretted that no account is given of the derivation of the name, or of the merits of this stove; but, from the tenor of the minute, it seems to have been then a well-recognised make. The minutes for the years 1774 and 1775 set out the arrangements for the erection of Stone Buildings, and the negotiations which resulted in the erection of the Buildings for the Accountant General and Deputy Registers of the High Court of Chancery, and the building for the Gentlemen of the Six Clerks' Office. These together made up the block of buildings fronting on Chancery Lane, now used as chambers and as the School of Arms for the Inns of Court R. V.

The erection of Serle's Court, now known as New Square, takes up some part of this volume. A Committee was appointed in 1680 to receive such proposals as should be made by Mr. Serle and Mr. Clarke concerning Fickett's Fields, with the result that in 1682 an agreement (which is set out in the Appendix) was entered into between the Society and Henry p. 458

Serle, also a member of the Society, for the erection by Serle of three ranges of buildings in Little Lincoln's Inn Fields or Fickett's Fields, to be called Serle's Court. Other persons were interested with Serle or claimed to be so. One action of Clerk v. Serle was decided by the House of Lords in Serle's favour in 1685, and another action of Serle v. Clerke, in which Lord Chancellor Jeffreys played a part, was also given in Serle's favour in 1689. Serle died shortly after this decision, and an Act of Parliament was carried in 1690 for the selling of Serle's estate and recognising the agreement between the Society and Serle. In the next year, Lord Chandos, Henry Vincent, and Dr. Barbon came before the Masters and it was agreed that Dr. Barbon should carry out Serle's agreement with the Society. From a subsequent mention of a Bill in Chancery against Dr. Barbon and others it may be inferred there were differences between the contracting parties ; and in 1693, Sir Thomas Cooke appears to have taken over the burden of Serle's agreement and to be engaged in a suit with the Society. By this time some of the buildings were erected, for 16 inhabitants of Serle's Court were called on to show cause why they had not been admitted to their chambers by the Society, and those of them not admitted to the House why they were not so admitted. A Book was provided for Serle's Court in which were to be entered the Articles between the Society and Serle, and all past and future orders relating to the Court. The first instance of reference to chambers by numbers, is on the admission of James Wittewrong, to No. 10, Serle's Court, recorded in the Serle Court Book. "The New Court, called Serle Court," as a minute recites, having been made by agreement part of the House and subject to the Rules thereof, the Bench repeatedly exacted admission into chambers at the hands of the Society, and compelled every person in residence to become a member of the Society. Under these rules, Sir Philip Yorke, A.G., inhabiting Serle's Court, was compelled to seek admission to the Society in 1724. An attempt was unsuccessfully made to obtain for Serle's Court, the exemption from Rating which Lincoln's Inn at that time enjoyed. At the request of the proprietors of Serle's Court, the title deeds of the Court were deposited in the Library : and, later on, the House undertook the gravelling and paving of the area of the New Square, in consideration of a payment by the Proprietors. The index will shew many details, for which space cannot be found here.

COMMONS.

The charge for Commons to the Bar and Students was in 1661 8s. 6d. for every week except Grand Week for which the charge was 10s. Every member was required to pay a minimum sum in respect of Commons for each term. This, called absent Commons, was fixed for a resident in the country in 1661 at a week's Commons and later on at a fortnight's Commons or 17s. ; but any one visus in villâ was "cast into Grand Week" at 15s., which brought his payment up to 23s. 6d. a term ; Benchers and Associates paid 14s. a week, whether absent or present : a Benchers, whose clerk was in Commons, paid 16s. a week for himself and his clerk. Any Member had the privilege of coming in and taking a repast at the price of 1s. 4d. (raised to 1s. 6d.) for each repast. An attempt was made to limit this privilege to Bar Moot days only and to Wednesdays, when Term began or ended on that day. As this restriction did not long remain in force, the privilege of taking repasts must have been of value to some members : it probably enabled them to attend the Moots and Bolts which were held in Vacation without paying Vacation Commons. p. 11

Vacation Commons were a convenience both to Students and Barristers who had to keep exercises in vacation. Mr. Prynne's Committee in 1660 reported in favour of the system. The charge was 6s. 6d. a week provided 30 Barristers and gentlemen were in Commons. In 1672 there was no reading, and the Bench refused to supply Commons, unless 20 gentlemen remained and paid their Commons beforehand. The "disorder" of 1680 has been dealt with under the head of Finance. Nine years later the Steward complains that there are no vacation Commons, no Readings, few Grand Days, and very few gentlemen in Commons in the Term Time. In 1725 the Bar and Students complain that having a right to keep Vacation Commons, they were refused liberty to keep them according to the usage of the Society, and yet were obliged to pay a fine for not keeping them, which was not in their power to do. Leave was therefore given for Vacation Commons, if there were a subscription of 21 gentlemen for that purpose, and if gowns were worn in Hall. The charge was to be 1s. 6d. towards the cost of bread, beer, and charcoal, &c., and 5s. for other expenses. p. 170

The food was the subject of much consideration. In 1693 the practice of keeping Ember weeks and fish days other than Fridays and Saturdays in every week was abandoned because "several gentlemen put themselves out of Commons and deserted the Hall, being unwilling to be tied to eat such unwholesome diet as salt fish and ling in the summer season to the great prejudice of their healths." A few years later the gentlemen petitioned that the dinner and supper might be reduced into one. This was granted by the Bench and dinner hour fixed at 2 p.m. A schedule of dinners was drawn up ; the food was to be boiled beef ; roast loins of mutton (for some reason legs of mutton had not been supplied up to this date) and fish. Beer at 10s. a barrel, but no more ale at the cost of the house. The price paid by p. 237

the Inn was 2s. for each mess, showing that then, as now, the amount paid for the dinners in Hall did not meet the cost of them.

pp. 260-1 In 1721 salt fish which had been the diet for each Friday in Easter and Trinity Terms and fish for every other Friday were discontinued, their place being taken by fish or flesh as the Quatuor should order.

p. 322 A Committee in 1741 inquired into all the grievances, extravagant and seq. expenses, and other mismanagements of the Society. They cut down the number of dishes on Grand Day, and made recommendations as to the purchase and consumption of wine, and reported that the cook was appropriating nearly half the mutton under the form of perquisites. Another schedule of dinners was promulgated in 1762, in which the first
p. 375 item of dinners on Fridays in Michaelmas and Trinity Terms is "Oysters as usual."

p. 421 The hour of weekday dinners in 1751 was 3 p.m., and on Sundays at 2 p.m. ; but in 1774 was put forward to 4 p.m. during term time.

p. 331 Wine was supplied in Hall to those who desired it, and the profits of the wine sold divided between the Head Porter and the Pannyerman.

The beer pots, salt-cellars and candlesticks used in the Hall appear to have been of pottery, and bought by the load ; £11 7s. is charged for two loads in 1692. Thirteen dozen candlesticks were bought for 6s. 6d. in 1715, and 11s. 3d. paid for pots bought at the Temple in 1727.

AMUSEMENTS.

Of the four Grand days (Vol. II., p. 235) only two are mentioned in this volume, that in Michaelmas Term held first on November 1st, and later on on the second Thursday in the Term, and that held on Candlemas Day. No Grand Day was held in 1679, because of the sad condition of the Temples, occasioned by the late dreadful fire, and (secondly) because the Feast of the Purification fell on the Lord's Day. The same course was followed in 1684 during the Great Frost, and sums of money were given to the poor of the two adjacent parishes and the poor prisoners of the Fleet, King's Bench, and Marshallsea Prisons.

Appen- Revels were held in Michaelmas and Hilary Terms. Those attended by dix. Charles II. were on January 3rd and 28th and in November. The gentlemen
pp. 137, were encouraged "to capacitate themselves to be Revellers"; the Book of 227 the Revels for 1662 contains the Programme of a very successful entertainment. The Master was usually of standing : Sir John Lee was made an Associate in the year of his office ; Mr. Rich another Master of the Revels was Lent Reader in the second year after he was Master. Mr. Rich's Bill
p. 76 for musick and lights for the year 1671 when Charles II. was present was taxed down to £7 19s. 8d. The penalty for refusing to serve was for the most part £20.

The Master of the Bench of Gray's Inn dined with the Society in 1660: on another occasion the ancient custom of a comotation with the Middle Temple was revived. p. 15

THAVIES INN.

The Summer Reading of the year 1664 failed through the fault of the Inn; as this happened only a few months after the issue of the Judges' Orders, which specially enjoined continuance of Readings, the Society fined Thavies Inn twenty nobles and pressed for the money.

Seven years later the rent was in arrear. As the lease had run out the Society brought an action of ejectment; Thavies Inn acknowledged the title of the Society and prayed for a new lease. Terms were agreed, but the Inn delayed taking up the lease; in the end a lease for 41 years was granted and accepted, and the Inn was in occupation in 1677, having in the meantime erected new buildings and a new Hall. p. 90 p. 112

In 1713 the Inn, on the ground of the vast expenses they had been at in repairing their premises, prayed for a new lease. Two years later the Inn is reported to be in a very flourishing condition, and the Society consider the question of a new lease. There is no further mention of the Inn until 1768, when an order is made for the appointment of a caretaker, and for the issue of an advertisement for letting the Inn. Advertisements in the Daily Advertiser and Gazetteer failed to produce a tenant, and in January, 1769, Thavies Inn was advertised to be "sold and not let." In May, the Bench declared that Mr. Middleton, of Lincoln's Inn, was "the best bidder for the absolute purchase of Thavies Inn, at the sum of £4,100," and the sale was completed in July, 1772. p. 241 p. 393 p. 393 p. 398

In accordance with a resolution of the Bench, the money produced by the sale was applied wholly or in part to the building of Stone Buildings. p. 399

FURNIVAL'S INN.

Bland's Buildings had been completed in 1660, and a prolonged negotiation between the Society and Furnival's Inn resulted in a lease by the Society at a rent of £8 a year with a present fine of £150 for a term of 50 years. A new lease was granted of Furnival's Inn in 1718 at the old rent on payment of £50 fine for 60 years; this was renewed in 1756 for 61 years at a rent of £8 a year with a covenant against assigning without leave or demising any portion to any person who did not practice or profess the law. p. 20 p. 253 p. 361

The procedure in the election of a Reader (of which part appears in Vol. I., pp. 336-363) is now fully shown. It was the duty of the outgoing

p. 23 Reader to submit a list of members of Lincoln's Inn qualified to read to the Bench ; out of this list the Bench chose three whose names were put before Furnival's Inn, and that Inn elected one of the three Readers for the ensuing year. The accident of a challenged election induced the Bench acting in the
 pp. 98, spirit of the Orders of 1664 to frame regulations for elections in future. The 99 first of these, describing the voting body of Furnival's Inn as "Ancients and others," proceeds to legislate on that basis. As the Principal and Ancients were the governing body, "the others" can only mean the other members of the Inn, and it follows that the voting body was all the members of the Inn. This conclusion supports the theory that the Inns of Chancery had a more popular form of government than the Inns of Court.

There is no protest against the rule of Lincoln's Inn during the whole of this period. Probably this unprecedented peace is due to the reassertion in the Judges' Orders of 1664 of the complete subordination of an Inn of Chancery to the Inn of Court whose property it was.

ATTORNEYS AND SOLICITORS.

The Orders of 1664 lay down that from thenceforth no Common Attorney or Solicitor be admitted of any of the four Inns of Court, repeating the Orders of 1614 and 1630 on the matter. But this injunction seems to
 p. 59 have been disregarded : for in 1668 the names of all Attorneys, Solicitors and Clerks who had been lately admitted into the House were to be delivered to
 p. 60 the next Council, and for the future none were to be admitted without the leave of the Council : and none, who had been admitted and practised, should be admitted into any chambers, so long as they continued such employment,
 p. 70 unless for good cause shown. Two years later the Bench refuse to allow the sale of a chamber to "a practising Clerk," and take like action in 1677. In 1772 the Attorneys and Solicitors are called on to pay their arrears for Commons and other dues on pain of being expelled the Society ; and an Attorney is in the next year expelled for non-payment of dues.

Attorneys and Solicitors still remained Members of the Society. It was
 p. 126 found necessary in 1679 to order that thenceforward no practising Attorney or Solicitor of the House should be called to the Bar : and Mr. Warkhouse, one
 p. 134 of the Fellows, being desirous of call to the Bar, discontinued the practice of an Attorney and put himself out of the Roll of Attorneys : he then applied himself to the study of the law and performed all his exercises and "civilly behaved himself by the space of seven years in the Society." The Bench called him to the Bar in 1681. Mr. Strode took the like course in 1687.
 p. 374 The Four Inns agreed in 1762 that no Attorney or Solicitor, Clerk in Chancery or Exchequer, should be called until they had discontinued practising as such for two years. Before the close of this volume in 1776 two solicitors, members of the House had been called to the Bar under those conditions.

The Solicitor, who was a member of the House, became subject to the rule forbidding litigation by a member of the House against the House or any other member. Mr. Martin, a member of the Society, misbehaved himself in being a common solicitor and particularly in soliciting a cause against the Society. Summoned before the Council, "on reproof by the Masters given him for this offence he so misdemeaned himself as he gave them a further just cause against him." Mr. Martin was put out of Commons, but on apology was readmitted. p. 106

Here may be set down the employment of a "private," and not a "common" solicitor by the Society. Mr. Goodricke, the Reader of Divinity, was desired, in 1675, to manage and solicit the business for recovery of the Charity or pious use given by the last Will of Henry Colfer Esq., late one of the Fellows of this Society, and was to be reimbursed his expences, out of the money recovered. This employment ceased the next year; but in 1685, prosecution of the same suit, was directed, and Mr. Goodricke "was employed to solicit the same," another instance, is that of Morse, in 1693. p. 102 p. 150 p. 186

CHRONICLE.

The Restoration leaves a marvellously small mark on the Records of the Society.

Within one month from the return of Charles II, two gentlemen, whose chambers had been disposed of during their suspension from the Society by colour of an Ordinance of Parliament for their adhering to the late King Charles of blessed memory and serving him in his wars, petitioned for a compensation. At the same Council eighteen Benchers "did solemnly take the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy," and those Masters absent were ordered to follow their example within a convenient time. The Principals of Thavies Inn and Furnival's Inn are recorded to have taken the oaths at the Bench Table End. p. 2

After the Long Vacation, came the expulsion from the Society of Millington, Corbett, Love, and Garland, Fellows of the Society, and every other person "that had any hand in that horrid and treacherous act of murdering our late Sovereign Lord K. Charles I of blessed memory or are, by his Majesty and now Parliament excepted out of their late gracious Act of Oblivion." These four had sat as Judges on the trial of Charles I, and all but Love signed the death warrant. Mr. Oliver St. John had the privilege of a stair case into the garden and a back door into Chancery Lane; and this was taken p. 4 away for reasons, which, considering the part he had played, may have been political, or may well have been based on the supposed interests of the Inn. Seven gentlemen only receive compensation for the loss of their chambers.

- p. 7 Two others whose call had been delayed by their opposition to the Parliament were called : of these Mr. Robert Clarke is an instance, having been admitted a student "about twelve years since, but by reason of the late usurpation in Government having withdrawn himself for many years, and thereby lost his opportunity, as many others have done, of being called to the Bar in course and according to his time : and he being a person very well known to be rightly affected to the King's Majesty and Kingly Government," is ordered to be called to the Bar.

- p. 25 But the Royalist party did not have their own way in all matters. The Society had become possessed of "the King's Majesty's picture, and had hung it in the Council Chamber ; it was placed in the Hall temporarily and while there was removed and taken away from the Hall by the means of some of the Fellows of the Society with an intent (as was conceived) to obstruct the order and direction of the Masters of the Bench." The Bench order that the picture be produced and delivered to the Chief Butler. As nothing is now known of any such picture it may be assumed that those who took it away never returned it. This incident closes the record of the Restoration in the Society's Books.

- p. 440 Charles II.'s first visit to Lincoln's Inn was on January 3rd, 1662. He came to see the Revels ; fortunately a copy of the Book of the Revels has been preserved in the Library ; its contents are reprinted in the Appendix.

- p. 24 The Society this year spent £2 17s. 6d. for wine, ale and faggots for the fire at the Queen's coming.

- pp. 46-9 In 1665 comes the first notice of the Great Plague. Strangers were ordered out of the Inn, and none but persons of quality were admitted to the Chapel during the time of infection. There was no autumn Reading ; the Preacher and Chaplain were given leave of absence until May, 1666, and watchers were appointed to guard the Inn. The mortality among the lawyers must have been considerable, for according to the memoirs of the Verney Family (Vol. IV., p. 130), Jefferies Verney, a lad in his teens, profiting by the havoc the plague had wrought among the lawyers, "put a gown on his back and began to plead before he had been called to the Bar." Upon the Plague followed the Fire ; and compensation is paid to the vintner at the St. John's Head Tavern in Chancery Lane for damage sustained by pulling down that house for the preservation of the Society in case the "late dreadful fire had approached so near to it." The limit of the fire is described in a letter printed in the Memoirs of the Verney Family (Vol. IV., pp. 139-140) :

Sir Nathaniel Hobart's house in Chancery Lane escaped, "but the fire was near them (the Hobart's) behind the Rolls where it got a great check." The fire however approached so close that, as a precaution, some of the goods of the Inn were moved at a cost of 20s.

In 1666, Sir Thomas Beverley was a Master of the Bench, and also Master of Requests. Sir Thomas was the holder of a Bench Chamber, and not having read in his turn, was ordered either to pay for his Chamber 200 marks, or leave it to the use of those Masters who had read, and wanted chambers, or who were about to read. He, it seems, appealed to the King, who, on the 19th November, wrote to "Our trusty and well beloved Masters of the Bench of Lincoln's Inn," signifying his pleasure, that the Bench should remit the fine, and allow him exemption so long as he continued Master of Requests, on the ground that the Master of Requests was one of the Royal Household Servants. A Committee of the Bench was appointed to wait upon his Majesty, and explain the situation. What passed at the interview, if one took place, does not appear; but a Minute of May 24th, 1669, discharges Sir Thomas of Readings, and of fines imposed on him for not Reading; "this is done" it adds "in obedience to the Command of the King's Letter."

King Charles' second visit to the Revels of Lincoln's Inn was in January, 1670-1. The Admission Register shows the admission of the Duke of Somerset, the Duke of Richmond and Lennox, and the Marquis of Worcester.

His third visit was on the occasion of his dining with the Reader, Sir Francis Goodricke in February, 1671-2. The signatures of his suite form the frontispiece to this Volume.

"A memorial of the King's high favour to the Society" was drawn up by Sir Robert Atkyns and written in the same book wherein the King and several of the nobility are admitted."

In the same year an application was made to the Bench touching a contribution for the redeeming of the Algiers captives. To this, directed to the Lord Keeper and recommended by him to the Society, an answer was made somewhat notable: Firstly, that the Society was not a corporation; secondly, that briefs had not been sent to any Inn of Court; and thirdly, that the greatest part of this Society, having habitations in the country, would contribute where they lived, and that the other part were young gentlemen and had only exhibitions (i.e., allowances) to live on.

In 1678-9 the House of Lords required a return from all Inns of Court and Chancery "of the Irishmen and of the Papists or reputed Papists." Lincoln's Inn returns two Irishmen, and altogether six Papists. Thavies Inn and Furnival's Inn have neither Irishmen nor Papists, as the Principals return.

p. 457 The Moorish Ambassador dined with the Bench in 1682 and left his signature in the Royal Book. This is given in the Appendix.

In 1685 came the Revocation of the Treaty of Nantes, and the issue p. 157-8 under the Great Seal of a Brief for a collection for the French Protestants : a systematic visitation from Chamber to Chamber, by the Chief Butler, produced a sum which was paid into the Chamber of London in accordance with His Majesty's proclamation.

James II. by the year 1686 had made up his mind to open the Bar to p. 158 Roman Catholics : and His Majesty's Solicitor-General, Sir Thomas Powys, in 1686 intimated to the Bench H.M.'s pleasure, that six members of the Inn should be called to the Bar : the Bench obeyed, and on July 4, 1688, on a similar intimation called Mr. Brown and Mr. Collett. William III's landing at Torquay became known in London on November 6th. On November 8th, Mr. Brown and Mr. Collett were called on to show cause why the order for their call to the Bar should not be vacated. Subsequently Mr. Collett's call was published ; but there is no record of the fate of p. 166-7 Mr. Brown. The change of Kings is marked by an absence of entries in the Black Book between November 8th, 1688, and February 7th, 1689.

pp. In 1701, Sir Richard Holford, one of the Masters, discovered that the 267-8-9 Coat of Arms used by the Society was not properly depicted, and he was directed to obtain an authentic certificate from the Heralds' College. Mr. Gregory King, Lancaster Herald, at the request of the Society, had the arms "depainted," and placed in a frame ; this painting still exists, showing the coat to be "azure, semé de fer de moline or, on a dexter canton or, a lion rampant purpure."

The great storm of November 26th, 1703 (alluded to by Addison in his " Campaign ") which caused such great damage in London and the Country did not leave Lincoln's Inn untouched. The entry of June 22nd, 1704, is sufficiently eloquent. " The bricklayer's bill now offered in Council by Mr. Treasurer amounting to a great sum of money, occasioned by the late great tempestuous wind shall be considered."

The Coronation of George II put the Society to an expense of 8s. for watching about the Inn on October 11, 1727.

The accounts for the years 1759-63* show the purchase by the Bench for use in the Chapel of forms of prayer marking the progress of the British Arms in those years. A general fast on February 16th, and a Thanksgiving on February 18th ; the latter, probably for the taking of Goree by Commander Keppel ; a thanksgiving on November 29th for the taking of Quebec, and a form of prayer on Admiral Hawke's defeating the French fleet at Quiberon ; in 1761 forms of prayer on the surrender of Pondicherry, Bellisle, Dominica and the late success in Germany (at Fillingshausen) precede a thanksgiving for the taking of Cuba. The conclusion of the Peace of Paris is marked by thanksgiving in 1763. The birth of George IV. and of the Duke of York were also acknowledged by thanksgiving in the Chapel.

* Sir H. Walpole writes in November, 1759, " Indeed one is forced to ask every morning what victory there is for fear of missing one."

Some casual notices of matters in the Inn may here be gathered together. p. 11
 Women were forbidden to lodge in the Inn. Public dancing was forbidden p. 203 with strangers, either in the Hall, Buttery, or Council Chamber. No coaches p. 35 in 1688 were allowed to come into the Courts of the House, but such as were p. 162
 "Noblemen's, Judges', and the King's Council," unless by special direction from any Master of the Bench. No coaches at all were admitted within gates p. 206 after 10 p.m., at which hour the Keys of the Great Gates were deposited in the Chamber of the Keeper of the Black Book for the night. This was in 1700 ; by 1772 Sedan Chairs must have been in general use ; and the Great Gate in Serle's Court was open for the admittance and going out of Sedan Chairs. In the next year "carriages," which apparently had superseded "coaches," are forbidden entrance by the Chancery Lane Gate during Sundays from 12 to 1 o'clock.

Efforts were made for the decoration of the Inn by the erection of dials p. 275 and seats, a pillar with a clock on it, statues, one of which was a mermaid, and the making of basins of water in the Benchers' Garden and elsewhere ; the p. 193 water being supplied by the New River Company at £10 per annum from p. 140 their mains near the Terrace Wall in Lincoln's Inn Fields.

Protection was taken against fire and robbery by the construction of a p. 254 reservoir, the purchase of a fire engine by Newsham, and the patrolling of p. 334 the Inn by night watchmen. Gentlemen on any of the staircases were p. 313 forbidden to light any but globular lamps. There were fires in 1730 and 1735, but a great fire broke out in 1752 ; an account of it taken from the p. 473
Gentleman's Magazine appears in the Appendix.

The centre of New Square was laid down in gravel, and seems to have been used for showing off horses ; an order of the Bench prohibits any p. 303 person riding any horse or mare "within the Society" (sic), in order for sale, or bringing any horse or mare but what belonged to a member. Probably in the same place Sir J. Fleet, Alderman of London and Colonel of the Red p. 212 Regiment drew up his Regiment for two hours, one Lord Mayor's Day, when Queen Anne had arranged to dine at the Guild Hall. The Masters were pleased to give him leave, upon promise that no guns should be fired, nor no drums beaten, but what were necessary for their marching in and out.

The Society are recognised from time to time to have a voice in the user and laying out of Lincoln's Inn Fields : they successfully protest against the

 p. 217 erection of booths and watchmen's boxes—and only consent to a roadway
 p. 308 being made in the Fields next to the "Terrass" wall, on condition that no
 coachway be made at any time from Great Turnstile into Lincoln's Inn Fields.

Many of the pictures and prints in the possession of the Society are mentioned in this volume. The picture of L.C.J. Hale was ordered to p. 114 be prepared for and hung up in the Library in 1677. No entry of payment for the picture appears in the accounts for that date, and in 1681 the Bench order that the picture of the late L.C.J. be very well drawn and set up in the Library at the charge thereof. The original order evidently was not carried out, and the execution of the second was deferred. For in 1720 is a p. 258 payment of £14 2s. 6d. to Mr. Rayner for a picture of "Justice Hale." In 1768 the picture of L.C.J. Hale, then in the Library, is copied for the Hon. Charles Yorke. At present there is but one picture of Hale in the possession of the Society, traditionally ascribed to Michael Wright. Whether the picture ordered in 1677 was not painted till 1720, and whether Rayner and not Wright is painter of the picture now in the Drawing room are questions which await solution. Sir J. Franklyn's picture probably was
 p. 235 the present of Lady Franklyn in lieu of the inscription authorised to be set up in the Library in 1709.

Of the prints, 20 were bought of John Bunce at 8s. a piece, and seventeen
 p. 329 more, at 10s. 6d. each. The Treasurer of the next year, 1743, was desired to buy
 p. 330 as many more prints as would make the set of Judges complete, and
 p. 349 hang them in the Council Room. Five guineas were paid to Mr. Virtue, p. 343 for the print of the Chapel in 1752. The prints of Lord Chancellor Talbot, Lord Northington, Lord Mansfield, and Lord Camden, were ordered to be bought in 1768, and the cost of Lord Northington and Lord Camden with frames, was 8s. 6d. each from Mr. Agar ; 10s. 6d. was paid to Mr. Boydell,
 p. 401 for Lord Camden's print.

How the Wyndham Legacy of £200 was spent in a picture by Hogarth to be placed at the upper end of the Hall is to be found at pp. 339 and 347.
 The Picture now stands in the Benchers' Vestibule and original letters from Hogarth are on the Drawing Room walls.

p. 228 Serjeant Green is noted "for the continuance of himself and his ancestors in the Society for one hundred years." A modern instance of as long a connection may be found in the note.*

* Cecil H. Russell (adm. 1853, and a present Master of the Bench) is the son of George Lake Russell (adm. 1823, and Judge of County Courts), who was the son of Henry Russell (adm. 1768, afterwards Chief Justice of Bengal, a Privy Councillor and a Baronet).

One entry, full of mystery, may well close the preface to this volume. It is in the accounts of 1727. "Five shillings paid to William Redington to encourage him to burn the charm and looking after the people in the Kitchen."

Mr. W. P. Baildon, F.S.A., prepared all of this volume, except the Preface, bringing to his labour knowledge of the past and veneration for the Inn of which he is a member.

* The Readings had been discontinued since the Autumn Reading of 1642; the office of the Marshal ceased at the same date; and the office of Pensioner had been abolished, or allowed to drop, (see Vol. II, pp. 361, 393). The appointment of the Master of the Revels ceases to be formally recorded, and the Stewardship of the Reader's Dinner is at this time always compounded for. The Dean of the Chapel, the Master of the Walks and the Keeper of the Library, were not at this time officers for a year only, but were, as will appear, appointed for indefinite periods from time to time.

† Charles was proclaimed king on May 8th, landed at Dover on the 26th, arriving in London on the 29th. His regnal year was calculated from Jan. 30th, 1649.

Nineteen Benchers present.

fo. 671.

"That the severall petitions of M<sup>r</sup> William Griffith and M<sup>r</sup> George Blundell, two of the gent. of this Society, whose chambers have been disposed of by the House during their suspension from the Society by colour of an Ordinance of Parliament for their adheereing to the late King Charles of blessed memory, and serving him in his warrs, be referred to M<sup>r</sup> Dunvill, M<sup>r</sup> Wentworth, M<sup>r</sup> Howell, M<sup>r</sup> Day, M<sup>r</sup> Manby and M<sup>r</sup> Charlton, or any three of them." They are to report whether the statements made in the petitions are correct, to whom the chambers were sold, what money was received for them, and what dues were owing by the petitioners at the time of their suspension.

Call to the Bar :

Julius Glanvill and Edward Rich. M<sup>r</sup> Rich's publication is suspended because he "hath not performed the compleate number of exercises formerly ordered by the Masters of the Bench to be performed by those who shall be called to the Barre."

Ambrose Betts and Michael Thomas are admitted into the number of the Porters, upon their petitions showing that they have acted as Porters for many years. The Steward shall provide them with badges.

At this Council eighteen Benchers "did solempnly take the Oathes of Allegiance and Supremacy; and it was then ordered that such of the Masters of the said Bench who were then absent, shall within convenient time take the same Oathes, and that for the future none shall be admitted to or be Associates at the Bench or Barre till they have taken the said Oathes of Allegiance and Supremacy, in such manner as hath been formerly accustomed in this Society before the late Warrs."

Council held on July 5th, 1660.

fo. 672.

Fourteen Benchers present.

"Upon the petition of M<sup>r</sup> Adam Cusack, shewing that he is a native of the Kingdome of Ireland and that his extraordinary occasions call him thither, and the Masters of the Bench, takeing notice of the many exercises he hath performed, and there having been severall presidents for calling students of this Society, being natives of that Kingdome, to the Barre upon their returne into their own cuntry before seaven yeares accomplished from their admission,—have thought fitt and doe order the said M<sup>r</sup> Cusack to be called to the Barre and published the next moot ; but he is not to practice in England till he be of full seaven yeares standing of this Society ; and this Order is not to be a president for calling any of the natives of this Kingdome to the Barre before the accustomed time."

"That the Pannyerman, when the season of the yeare serves, doe at his own charge plant twenty trees in the Walkes, and make good that number in case any of the plants shall happen to dye ; and that he doe not for the future presume to medle with the felling any trees without licence from the Master of the Walkes, upon paine of being turned out of his office."

Every gentleman in commons or seen in town any time within that week shall pay 15s. for the said Grand Week's commons.

Council held on November 19th, 1660.

"Ordered that Gilbert Millington, Miles Corbett, Nicholas Love, and Augustine Garland, Fellowes of this Society,† and all and every other person or persons whatsoever of this Society that had any hand in that horrid and trecherous act of murdering our late Sovereign Lord, King Charles the First, of blessed memory, or that are by his Majesty and his now Parliament excepted out of their late gracious Act of Oblivion, be expelled this Society of Lincoln's Inne abovesaid; and that the respective chambers of onely the said persons be forfeited and seised upon to the use of this House. M<sup>r</sup> Goodricke is pardoned the failure of the exercise charged on him, because he was employed about the affairs of his country in Parliament, and also because no notice was given and no case brought to him.

The Treasurer shall pay to M<sup>r</sup> Oglandby £10, as a gratuity for the Bible he presented to the Society.*

"That M<sup>r</sup> James,† haveing been admitted student of this Society above thirteen yeares since, and many of his time haveing been called to the Barre without performance of exercise, the discontinuance whereof was occasioned by the late Warrs for severall yeares both before and after the said M<sup>r</sup> James had time to be called to the Barre, and he declining his right thereunto att that time by reason of the ingagement‡ for a Comonwealth against Kingly government, required of all persons to be admitted to the profession and practice of the Law, and he being a person known to be rightly affected to the present government and opposite to the late usurped powers,—It is therefore ordered that the said M<sup>r</sup> James, paying all house duties, be called to the Barre, and his antiquity saved unto him." * In addition to the payment to the bricklayer, considerable sums amounting altogether to £168 3s. 6d. were paid to carpenters, plasterers, plumbers, smiths and glaziers. As no new chambers were built, so far as appears from the Black and Red Books, this expenditure is difficult to explain. The new garden walls and the rebuilding of the shops by the Gate, hardly seem to account for it.

* A volume lettered "Admission Book &c. 1671 to 1673," and having this title, "The Admittance Booke of Lincolne's Inne, whearin his most excellent Majestie, his Royall Highnesse the Duke of Yorke, his Highnesse Prince Rupert, and many Lords and honorable Persons, have entred their names with their owne hands, the nine and twentieth day of February, Anno Dni, 1671." The contemporary binding of black morocco is elaborately tooled and gilt, having the royal arms and the initials C.R. in panels on the sides. The silver clasps and mounts are modern; London hall mark, 1866-7.

Inne for the Lent Reading in the yeare one thousand, six hundred, seaventy one [two], haveing invited the King, his Royall Highnesse and Prince Rupert, and diverse of the Nobilitie to dine in Lincolne's Inne Hall on such day of his Reading as his Ma<sup>tie</sup> should make choice off, His Majestie was pleased to appoint Thursday, the nyne and twentieth of February, one thousand, six hundred, seaventy one; And accordingly, that day his Ma<sup>tie</sup>, together with his said Royall Highnesse and his Highnesse Prince Rupert, being also attended by the Duke of Monmouth, the Duke of Richmond, the Earles of Manchester, Bath and Anglesey, the Lord Viscount Halifax, Lord Bishop of Ely, Lord Newport, Lord Henry Howard, and diverse others of great qualitie, came to Lincolne's Inne. His Ma<sup>tie</sup> made his entrance through the Garden at the great Gate opening into Chancery Lane next Holborne,* where M<sup>r</sup> Reader and the rest of the Benchers and Associates waited his comeing, and attended his Majestie up to the Terras Walke next the Feild, and soe through the Garden; the Trumpetts and Kettle Drums from the leads over the highest bay window, in the middle of the Garden Buildings, sounding all the while.

"And from the Garden his Ma<sup>tie</sup> went to the new Councell Chamber, the Barristers and Students in their gownes standing in a rowe on each side, betweene the Garden and the Councell Chamber. After a little rest, his Ma<sup>tie</sup> veiued the Chappell, returning agayne to the Councell Chamber.

"From thence, as soone his table (being placed upon the assent att the upper end of the Hall, and railed in) was furnished, his Majestie was brought into the Hall, where his Majestie sate under his Canopy of State, being served by the Reader as Sewer upon his knee, with the towell, before he did eate, his Royall Highnesse sitting att the end of the table on his right hand, and Prince Rupert att the other end. The Dukes and Lords, and other his Majestie's attendants of qualitie, after some short tyme of waiting, had leave from his Majestie to sitt downe to dinnar att tables prepared for them on each side of the Hall.

"The Reader and some of the Benchers, to witt, Sir Thomas Beverley, Master of Requests to his Majestie, Sir Robert Atkins, Knight of the Bath, all the tyme of his Majestie's dineing waiteing neere his Majestie's chaire; and foure other of the Benchers, M<sup>r</sup> Day, M<sup>r</sup> Pedley, M<sup>r</sup> Stote and M<sup>r</sup> Manby, with white staffes, waited as Controlers of the Hall to keepe good order; and above fifty of the Barristers and Students, the most parte of them attending as waiters and carrying up his Majestie's meate, whiche was served upon the knee; the rest of the Barristers and Students waiting upon the Lords att their table. The three courses wherein were exceeding great plenty and variety of dishes, and after them a most liberall banquet was served up by the said Barristers and Students, and delivered by them upon their knees att the King's table. The Musick, consisting of his Majestie's violins, playing all the tyme of dinna in the Gallery at the lower end of the Hall.

"Towards the end of dinna, his Majestie, to doe a Transcendant Hono<sup>r</sup> and Grace to this Society, and to expresse his most gracious acceptance of their humble duty and affection towards him, was pleased to commaund the Booke of Admittances to be brought to him, and with his owne hand entred his Royall Name therein, most graciously condescending to make himselfe a Member thereof, which high and extraordinary favour was instantly acknowledged by all the Members of this Society then attending on his Majestie with all possible joy, and received with the greatest and most humble expressions of gratitude, itt being an example not presided by any former King of this Realme.

"His Royall Highnesse [the Duke of York] and Prince Rupert followed this great and highest example, as also the Dukes and other Lords, who, before his Majestie's rising from dinna, borrowed gownes of the Students, and put them on, and in those gownes waited on his Majestie, with which his Majestie was much delighted.

"And his Majestie, through his owne most obliging favour vouchsafed to it, having made himselfe more neerely and intimately concern'd for the good of this Society, was pleased himselfe to begin a Health to the welfare thereof, and to cause itt to be pledg'd in his owne presence, immediately gave the Reader leave to drinke his Majestie's health, and to begin to his Royall Highnesse.

"Then rising from dinna, he was agayne attended to the new Councill Chamber, where he conferr'd the hono<sup>r</sup> of Knighthood on M<sup>r</sup> Nicholas Pedley and M<sup>r</sup> Richard Stote, two of the Benchers who had in their turns bene Readers of this House, as also upon M<sup>r</sup> James Buttler, one of the Barristers, and M<sup>r</sup> Francis Dayrell, one of the Students; that soe each degree and order of the Society might have a Signall Testimony of his Majestie's high favour.

"His Majestie, upon his departure, made large expressions of his most gracious acceptance of the enterteynment, and return'd his thanks to the Reader, and was pleased to signifie the great respect and esteeme he should ever have for the Societie.

"The Gentlemen of the Horse Guards, Yeomen of the Guard, and other inferior attendants, were bountifully enterteyned att the costs and charges also of the Reader. The Gentlemen of the Horse Guards dined in the old Councell Chamber, the Yeomen of the Guard in M<sup>r</sup> Day's chamber, and the coachmen and lacques in the Gardiner's house, to all theire contentment.

"On Saturday following, M<sup>r</sup> Reader, Sir Robert Atkins, Sir Nicholas Pedley and Sir Richard Stote, Benchers and Readers of Lincoln's Inne, waited on his Majestie att Whitehall, being conducted to his Majestie's presence by the Earl of Bath, and gave most humble thanks for that high and Transcendant Honour he had beene pleased to vouchsafe to this Society, which was graciously received by his Majestie, and did the said Benchers the Hono<sup>r</sup> to Kisse his Hand."

* This is interesting as showing the growing tendency to consider the Treasurer as head of the Inn during his year of Office, of which there is little or no trace until after the discontinuation of the Readers. It must be noted, however, that the process was not yet complete; the name of Peter Warburton, the Treasurer for this year, is written last in the list of Benchers present at this Council, he being the junior Bencher present; whereas the Reader, during the time of his Reading, always headed the list.

"And the said Benchers can not but take notice that this proceeding is the more unreasonable and ungratefull in the said inhabitants of the said Libertye, because they have great dependance upon and benefitts from the said Societie, which, if it were withdrawne, may bring a prejudice upon the said Libertye not to be retrieved.

"And the said Benchers have reason to believe the generalitie of the said inhabitants of the said Libertye doe not approve of these proceedings.

"The said Masters of the Bench doe likewise apprehend that this innovacion may likewise concerne the other three Innes of Courts, and all or most of the Innes of Chancery, and that the liberties and priviledges of the whole profession of the law may be much concerned in these matters; and doe conceive, therefore, that it is fitt for them to consult the rest of the profession, or such of them as are proper, touching a matter of such generall concerne."

The present No. 17 is at the south end of the old Hall, and occupied the space behind the screen.

p. 223. "A representacion signed by severall of the Barristers and Students of this Society being laid before this Councell, setting forth that they being, pursuant to a late Order of the Bench, refused keys to the new railed garden, did conceive the said Order to be an infringement of their right for the Benchers to appropriate the said garden to themselves, since the Barristers and Students have an equall right to and interest in their respective chambers to which the said Garden belongs, and it being the ground of the Society at large, and repaired at the publick expence, and never before appropriated to the sole use of the Benchers.

"And further setting forth that they who have or may have a right to keep Vacacion Commons think themselves aggrieved by being refused liberty to keep them according to the usage of this Honourable Society, and yet be obliged to pay a fine for not keeping those Vacacion Commons, which is not in their power to do.

"It is Ordered that such Barristers or Students as are obliged to keep Vacacion Commons shall have a liberty to keep the same, if there is a subscription of 21 gentlemen for that purpose; and such number may consist as well of those who are not obliged to keep Vacacion Commons, as of such as are. And in case any Barrister or Student who is obliged to keep Vacacion Commons, shall not think fit to keep the same, he shall be at liberty to compound the usual forfeitures paid in such cases, for one half thereof.

"And it is further Ordered that all gentlemen who keep Vacacion Commons shall come into the Hall with their gowns, and wear them during the time of dinner; and each gentleman is to allow 1s. 6d. per week towards the expences of bread, beere, charcoal, &c."

* The owners of chambers in Serle's Square must contribute £16 a year, being half the cost of providing a porter and watchman for the Gate there and cleaning the Bog House. As to the gravelling and paving of Serle's Court, the Articles made between M<sup>r</sup> Serle and the Bench do not contain any agreement on that head, but it is conceived that it ought to be done by the owners of chambers in the Square. An estimate has been obtained for doing this, amounting to £109, which it is proposed to raise by payments of £1 17s. 6d. for each ground chamber, and £1 10s. for each chamber one and two pair of stairs.

"Sheweth—

"That by Articles enterd into between the then Masters of the Bench and M<sup>r</sup> Henry Serle, the builder of Serle's Court, (now part of the said Society), it is expressly stipulated that no other buildings than the three ranges of building, whereof the said Court consists, should be erected or built on the ground therein mentioned and described, but that the rest of the said ground should at all times thereafter be open, wast, and unbuilt, for the prospect and recreation of the Society and members thereof; and it is thereby agreed that the part of the said ground behind the first range of building should be made use of for a laystall for ever for the Society, and be enclosed with a brick wall 10 foot high, with a gateway at the south end thereof.

"That under the said Articles, your petitioner apprehends the Masters of the Bench are become interested in the premises as Trustees for keeping the same open and unbuilt, for the benefit of the Members of the said Society.

"Your petitioner therefore humbly submitts the case of the said Sir Thomas Cookes Winford (who resides in the country) to your Worships' consideration, and humbly hopes the Bench will effectually execute the said trust, and take such measures that the said building may be stayed and taken down, and the said ground be restored to its former state, and that such other redress may be had in the premises as shall be just."

Report on the petition of George Hall :— p. 417.

"Wee find that the attendance of the said George Hall is from 9 in the morning till one, every day in the year, and also, in the summer time, from four till seven in the afternoon, and that he has an allowance of 12s. a year for cleaning the Library, and 4s. a year for mops and brooms.

"Wee also find that it has been the constant method for a great many years past to appoint the same person Library Keeper and Second Butler.

"Wee also find that the said George Hall was appointed to these offices about eighteen years agoe, and that he has a salary from the House of £8 a year as second Butler, commons in the Term time, and an allowance of 5s. a week communibus annis, which amounts to about £10 a year; that he has 6s. 4d. upon the admittance of every member, which communibus annis amounts to about £6 13s. 4d. a year; and that he is entitled to 10s. for [?from] every gentleman upon his being called to the Barr, which communibus annis amounts to about £3 a year.

"Wee find that it has been usual for every member residing in the Society to pay 6d. a term to the Under Library Keeper's Roll, and 1s. a year to the Second Butler's Roll.

"Wee find that the Petitioner has received on account of the said Rolls for the last year about £10, and that he never received in one year above £14; and that if he was to receive from every member residing in the Society, it would amount to upwards of £30 a year.

"Wee find that an Order of Council was made on the 28th of May, 1750, for every member residing in the Society to pay 6d. a term to the Under Library Keeper, pursuant to former Orders.*

"Wee are of opinion that it will be proper for the Bench to support their Orders, and to enforce payment of the said Rolls, by refusing to grant any favour to such of the resident members who have neglected to pay to the said Rolls, by calling them to the Bar, compounding their commons, or in any other way, till they have discharged the arrears of those Rolls; and to make an Order for that purpose."

They are of opinion that there is no legal remedy, and advise a Bill in Chancery in the names of six of the Benchers, on behalf of themselves and all other the Benchers, Barristers, and Fellows of the Society. The proposed Bill is sketched out; it recites, inter alia, "that the Society of Lincoln's Inn is a voluntary Society, very anciently established for the use and practice of the Law, and that it has been subject to wholesome Rules and Orders for the regulation thereof, which Rules and Orders have been generally obeyed and performed, by means whereof the Courts of Justice have been supplied with fit and able men to administer Justice, and with proper advocates to attend the said Courts, by which the dignity of the Law has been supported and maintained."]

* "Whereas a representation of the Members of this Society having Chambers in Serle's Court hath been made to us, that they have been assessed by the Committee of S<sup>t</sup> Clement's Danes the sum of £213, instead of the sum of £25 assessed upon those chambers, in pursuance of the Act of Parliament, as part of the Inn. And whereas at a Council held on the 23rd day of January, 1772, an Order was made by the Benchers of this Society then present, of which a minute was made (as usual) in the words following, viz. :—' M<sup>r</sup> Grint to wait upon the Committee at S<sup>t</sup> Clement's to let them know the Society do not interfere with charges on Serle's Court, which are freeholds, and pay all charges on those sides of Serle's Court.' And whereas the proper officer of this Society, in drawing up the Order hereinafter mentioned from the said minutes, misapprehended the true sense thereof, and prepared the same in the words following, viz. :—' Ordered that M<sup>r</sup> Grint wait upon the Committee for the pavements at S<sup>t</sup> Clement's, and acquaint them that this Society will not interfere with the charges made on the chambers in Serle's Court for the pavements in Serle's and Cary Streets, the said chambers being freehold, and liable to all such charges, exclusive of this Society.' And whereas by the true sense of such minutes the said Order did not declare, nor was the same intended to declare, that the freehold chambers in Serle's Court were excluded out of or were not part of this Society—It is therefore ordered that so much of the said Order as consists in the words, 'exclusive of this Society', be discharged.

"And it is resolved that this Society take proper measures for defending the said members from the payment of the said tax of £213, it appearing to us that the chambers in Serle's Court have always been assessed to all publick rates as a part of the Inn, and have paid all duties to the Inn; and that out of the fund, consisting of their payments as well as others, the payment for the new pavement in Chancery Lane has been defrayed. And it not having been the intention of the Bench to declare that Serle's

VISIT OF CHARLES II, 1662.

(Not referred to in the text.)

1661-2, Jan. 3.—“To Faithorne's, and there bought some pictures of him: and while I was there, comes by the King's life-guard, he being gone to Lincoln's Inne this afternoon to see the Revells there; there being, according to an old custome, a prince and all his nobles, and other matters of sport and charge.”—Pepys' Diary.

1662, Jan. 1.—“I went to London, invited to the solemn foolerie of the Prince de la Grange at Lincoln's Inn, where came the King, Duke, &c. It began with a grand masque, and a formal pleading before the mock Princes, Grandees, Nobles, and Knights of the Sunn. He had his Lord Chancellor, Chamberlain, Treasurer, and other Royal Officers, gloriously clad and attended. It ended in a magnificent banquet. One M<sup>r</sup> Lort was the young spark who maintain'd the pageantry.”—Evelyn's Diary.

MSS. of the Duke of Somerset. John Kelland to Sir Edward Seymour. 1661[-2], Jan. 7, Pensford. “I am glad to hear of his Majesty's dining at Lincoln's Inn with the P—— de Grange; to have some comedy after so many tragedies; we shall enjoy halcyon days again I hope.”—Hist. MSS. Com., Rcp. XV, App. 8. p. 93.

Εγκυκλοχρεία or Vniversal Motion, Being part of that Magnificent Entertainment by the Noble Prince, De la GRANGE, LORD LIEVTENANT OF LINCOLN'S INN, Presented to the High and Mighty CHARLES II. Monarck of Great Brittain, France and Ireland. On Friday 3 of January 1662. LONDON Printed 1662.

Εγκυκλοχρεία

or

Vniversal Motion,

The several Modes of Dancing, according to the Primitive Invention of different Nations, performed in 12 Entries, In the habit of each Countrey,
By English men.

I.

A Clownish Carrier with a Packet of Books to be distributed by the Master of the Ceremonies, wherein is described the whole designe : who daunceth a Darbshire Round.

II.

Gives you a Bouree, in the habit of a Thrasonical Gasconian ; To let you know, all Frenchmen are not Butterflies.

III.

Presents the variety of Expressions, made by Motions and Actions of the Body only ; For which we are indebted to the Quaker, the last Inventor of Ecclesiastical Postures, who turned Informer, is like to be troublesome to our Assembly.

IV.

Shews the truest and most genuine steps of Ballet.

V.

Two other Clownes with their Lasses, (a double pair of Northern Tikes) who dance a ligge, the first-born of a Scottish Bagpipe.

VI.

Presents you with a Phantastick Saraband, manag'd by a Spaniard, To shew a Phantastick Don can be as ridiculous as the most Antick Mounseieur.

VII.

Throws you in a Drunkard, with steps proper only to that humor : suitable to the Windmil of his Pericranium, which mocions we owe to the lightness of a Dutchman's Breeches.

VIII.

Gives you a Country Dance, perform'd by Sheapheards and Sheapherdesses, in the habits of Arcadian Pastorals ; who set forth the Innocency of their minds, by the simplicity of their manners.

IX.

Presents a Corant single and figured, and a Saraband serious, both ascrib'd to the Ingenuity, and Bon mene of a well temperd Frenchman.

X.

An entry of Italian Pantaloons; to shew there are Madmen and Fools in every Countrey, even at Rome, Paris, and particularly in London.

XI.

Presents you (the delight of its age) the Canaryes, first invented by the lofty Italian, who generally has more wit than honesty.

XII.

An entry of Swises, who had rather fight than dance, but loves the Argent better then both.

---

A Descant upon the several Movements.

*Great Sir, y've seen Vs, like the active Sun
To please the World, through the whole Zodiack run;
Y've seen the Noble Spaniard Countermand
All France, ith Marches of a Saraband:
And yet with such wise care his Limbs dispose
As if h'ad got the Frenchman in his Hose.*

*Y've seen the Mounsieur move, his Arm, Foot, Knee,
And shrugge, as if no Nation danct but he:
His Alamod Corant, his Saraband Pace,
His Bourees; all performd, with the Bon-Grace.*

*Y've seen th'Italian dance the Pantaloone?
No Region wants a Madman or Buffoon!*

[The remainder of this verse has been cut off sometime in binding; it related to the Shepherds.]

*The Bonny Scotchman and his merry Lasses,
At Jigge and Bagpipe all the rest surpasses;
What mischief did (that Scotch-witch) Covenant do,
Who charmd the Organs and the Bagpipes too?*

*Most Excellent! active Nations! all put down
The British Bard, sufferd to Act the Clown.
To move the Carriers pace: or Coupee over
With Packets from proud Calais to poor Dover.*

*And yet nor Seignieur, nor the stately Don
Are much above the middle Region :
Tis well in Rome or Spain, if you can see A handsome Ball once in a Iubilee !*

*O but the Mounsieur, Englands Dancing Master
He walks on Parian Marble, Paris-Plaister !
Like th' Element of fire, his spirit soon
Lifts him up to the Concave of the Moon.
Dances as soft and nimble as the Aire ;
Who vies with him practises to despair !
Dull Englishman is forct to go to France
To change his Gold wear clothes, and learn to dance.*

*Since t'must be so, weel strike sail and submit,
Wishing the French more Pride, our selves more Wit.
Grant their Minerva, curious, neat, exact,
What ere they can Imagine we dare Act.*

*Inspir'd with Plumbroth we dance every man,
Save (who eats none) our Presbyterian ;
Hee's pardon'd if he move no more, but will Quietly, with his good Good Old Cause, sit still.*

*Thanks to the Quaker our Last-mover, he Listed himself into our Company,
Who went good man ! to teach the Pope at Rome,
A Babylon-slip ; the Time yet was not come !*

*But turn'd our Pursevant, a Lurch, a Pryer ;
We wisht the Iesuited knave a Cloyster'd Fryer
Good Saint to shew what weight his Talents beare Begot a Negro, no Christian you may sweare !
How ere his various postures helpt to prove,
The Brittish Orbe, like other Spheares can move.*

*England I am sure in former times could dance.
Wittness her many Capers into France.*

NOTE V.

THE JUDGES' ORDERS, 1664.

Dugdale, Origines Juridicales, p. 322.

Orders made and set down the 18th day of June, in the 16th year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord Charles the II. by the grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. by the Right Honourable the Lord High Chancellour of England,§ and all the Judges of both Benches, and Barons of the Exchequer, by the command of the King's Majesty signified by the Lord Chancellour, for the Government of the Innes of Court and Chancery. p. 39.

* Some words apparently omitted.

† Sir Orlando Bridgeman.

‡ Sir Robert Hyde.

§ Sir Edward Hyde, Earl of Clarendon.

1.—That the Innes of Chancery shall hold their Government subordinate to the Benchers of every of the Innes of Court to which they belong : and that the Benchers of every Innes of Court make laws for governing them ; as to keeping Commons, and attending and performing exercises according to former usage : And in case any Attorney, Clerke, or Officer of any Court of Justice, being of any of the Innes of Chancery, shall withstand the directions given by the Benchers of Court, upon complaint thereof to the Judges of the Court in which he shall serve, he shall be severely punished, either by fore-judging from the Court, or other wise as the case shall deserve.

2.—That the Benchers of every Innes of Court, cause the Inns of Chancery to be surveyed, that there may be a competent number of Chambers for Students ; and that every year an exact Survey be taken, that the Chambers allotted for that purpose, be accordingly employed.

3.—For that there may be an abuse in the lodging and harbouring of ill Subjects and dangerous persons in the Innes of Court and Chancery, being privileg'd and exempted places ; it is ordered that there be general Searches in every Innes of Court and Chancery twice every Michaelmass-Terme, and once every other Terme, to be agreed upon by the general consent of the Readers and Benchers of the respective Houses of Court ; and likewise once every Vacation.

4.—For that the Society ought to give a principall example of good government in matters of Religion, and to be free, not only from the crime, but from the suspicion of ill affection in that kind ; it is ordered, that every Gentleman of the several Societies aforesaid, which shall be in Commons at any time within one year after publishing of these Orders, or after ; and shall not receive the Communion in the same Society, by the space of any one year together, shall be expelled ipso facto.

5.—For that the Institution of these Societies was ordained chiefly for the Profession of the Law, and in a second degree for the education of the Sons and Youth of riper years of the Nobility and Gentry of this Realm, and in no sort for the lodging or abode of Gentlemen of the Country ; which, if it should be suffered, would be a disparaging of the same Societies, and to name them from Hospicia to Diversoria ; it is ordered, that no Knight, or Gentleman, Forreiners, or Discontinuers, or others, not being usuall in Commons in the same Societies, shall be admitted or allowed to lodge in any of the Houses aforesaid.

6.—For that there ought alwayes to be observed a difference between Utter-Barristers, Readers in Court, and Apprentices at Law, which are the principall persons next to Serjeants and Judges in Administration of Justice ; and Attorneys and Solicitors which are but immaterial* persons of an inferior nature : therefore it is ordered, that from henceforth no common Attorney or Solicitor shall be hereafter admitted of any of the four Houses of Court.

7.—For that the over-early and hasty practise of Utter-Barristers doth make them the less grounded and sufficient, whereby the Law may be disgrac'd, and the Clyent prejudic'd : therefore it is ordered, that for the time to come no Utter-Barrister begin to practise publickly at any Barr at Westminster, untill he hath been three years at the Barr, except such Utter-Barrister, as for the time be, or shall have been Readers in some Houses of Chancery.

8.—That none be admitted to the Barr, but only such as be at least of seven years continuance, and have kept the Exercises within the House, and abroad in Innes of Chancery, and have been frequently in Commons according to the Orders of the House ; and none to be called to the Barr by Readers, but by the Bench at Parliaments, Councells and Pensions ; and that when they shall find a number of fit and learned students of honest conversation, and well deserving the same.

9.—That the Benchers hereafter be chosen for their learning, for their duly keeping the Exercises of the House ; for their honest behaviour, and good disposition ; such as for their experience be of best note and ability to serve the Kingdome : and if any refuse to read, that they do undergo such Fine and Censure, as the Benchers or Readers shall think fit to lay upon them ; which, if they shall refuse to pay or performe, then upon complaint to the Judges, such course shall be taken by them, as shall enforce them to the performance thereof.

10.—For that an outward decency in Habit and Apparel is an ornament to all Societies, and containeth young men within the bounds of civility and order ; it is ordered that no Gentleman of any House of Court or Chancery, shall come into the several Halls, Churches, or Chappells of the several Societies with Cloaks, Swords, or Daggers, upon pain to undergo the penalties contained in the Orders of the several Houses, which are strictly to be put in execution.

11.—For that all Government is strengthened or slackned by the observing or neglecting of the reverence and respect which is to be used towards the Governours of the same : therefore it is required, that due reverence and respect be had by the Utter-* Ministerial in the Orders of 1614 and 1630 ; see Vol. II, pp. 441 and 455.

Barristers, and younger sort of Gentlemen to the Readers, Benchers, and Ancients of either House.

12.—It is ordered that Readings in the Innes of Court begin at the usuall times, and continue untill the Friday in the second week, next after their Commencements inclusive, as hath been heretofore used: and for the prevention of disorder, that the Readers take care that no person be permitted to drink in the Cellers, and there be no expence of Wine in the House, but Publickly in the Hall at Meales.

13.—For that Readings are grown to so excessive a charge, that many of eminent abilities for learning have been discouraged from undertaking the same, and some which did have been much disabled thereby in their Estates, to the injury of them and their Families; it is ordered, that no Reader have above twelve attendants in Liveries, nor exceed above three hundred pounds in the whole charge of his Reading, except such as are of the Kings, Queens, or Princes Councell; or such others which have liberty to come within the Barr; or the Recorder of the City of London for the time being.

14.—For the better supporting and carrying on of Readings, it is ordered that such Benchers, Barristers, and other Gentlemen of the severall Societies attend at the Readings for arguing the Reader's Cases, and performing other exercises and services, both within the Societies, and at the Innes of Chancery, as hath been used by the ancient orders of the respective Innes of Court: And that the Benchers consider of, and impose fitting penalties to enjoyn the due observance thereof.

15.—It is ordered, that Readers at Innes of Chancery be chosen, and continue; that Readings, and all other Exercises be duly performed there according to the former usages of the respective Innes of Court and Chancery.

16.—For prevention of unnecessary expence, lately crept into the Innes of Court, and of disorders thereby occasioned, it is ordered, that no Gentleman of any Innes of Court, being either called to the Barr, or at, or under the Barr, who shall bring in any Barr, or other Moote, shall give any entertainment with Wine or otherwise to the Gentlemen of the Society, or others, either within or out of the House, upon penalty that the Gentleman who breaks this Order, shall pay ten pounds to the Society, and that such Moot shall not be taken to be an Exercise, but he to remain in the same, and no better condition, than as if the Moot had not been at all performed.

17.—For that it is found by experience, that by the neglect of Commons in the Vacation, the Gentlemen of the Innes of Court are often drawn to frequent Ordinaries, Gaming-Houses, and other places of disorder, whereby the neglect of their Studies, if not the corruption of their Manners is occasioned ; it is ordered, that the Benchers of every Innes of Court take care that Commons be constantly kept as well all the Vacations as in the Terme time (except as is herein after-mentioned) and that the Barristers and other Gentlemen of the Societies do keep, or be cast into Commons, according to the antient orders of the respective Societies : But for the prevention of dishonour to the Societies, by the great disorders and mischiefs which happen by Gaming, and other licentious courses lately used in the time of Christmass, no commons shalbe kept in any Innes of Court in the time of Christmass, or in one week before or after : And, if this Order shall not be observed, or if any shall presume to break open the Hall, Kitchin, or Celler-doores in any Innes of Court, or attempt the same for the keeping of Christmass Commons, that complaint be forthwith made thereof to the Lord Chief Justices, or any other the Judges which shall be then in Town, who will take a speedy and effectual course for the suppressing and punishing thereof.

And lastly, for that the keeping up of constant Exercises is the chiefest means of inciting Gentlemen to diligence in their Studies, and of attaining a sufficient ability in the profession of the Law ; it is ordered, that the Benchers of the several Inns of Court take special care that Exercises be regularly performed, as well in the Vacations as in the Terms, according to the Orders of the respective Houses : And for the better support thereof in the Vacations, that Barristers and Gentlemen under the Barr be strictly enjoyned by the Benchers of every Innes of Court, to keep their Vacations, according to the ancient Customes of the respective Houses.

[Signed by the Chancellor (Clarendon) and all the other Judges, twelve in number, except Sir Harbottle Grimstone, M.R.]

THE MOROCCO AMBASSADOR, 1682.

(Not referred to in the text.)

March 4th, 1681-2.—The Morocco Ambassador went to see the Society of Lincoln's Inn, where he was received by the Masters of the Bench and gentlemen of that Society: he was pleased to walk in the garden, and from thence he was conducted to the Councill Chamber, where he had a very good banquet prepared for him by the Masters of the Bench, and was pleased to enter his own name in the book, as a member thereof; so, giving the Masters thanks, he returned very well satisfied.—Luttrell's Diary, i, 169.

In the fourth edition of Lane's Student's Guide through Lincoln's Inn, 1823, this autograph is given on the same plate as those of the Royal and other guests in February, 1671-2 (see Frontispiece to this volume). Lane makes the following statement (p. 227), but gives no authority:—

“Among the persons who accompanied his majesty on that day, was the Turkish Ambassador, who, as is common with Mussulmans, has prefaced his signature with the usual profession of faith and invocation for mercy. These seems to be written in a Turko-Arabic dialect, which is found very difficult at the present time to understand: the letters, too, are not clearly formed. The following translation, however, (which was procured from the India House), we doubt not will be found correct:—

“‘Praise to the one God. The signature of the humble Alhajh Allah Mohammed, the son of Mohammed-Sahy Allah, son of Abukerâi. God be merciful to him.’”

It appears now more probable that this is the signature of the Moorish Ambassador of 1682. The signature is on a subsequent page to that on which the signatures of Charles II and his suite appear. It stands on the page by itself, with no words or date to connect it with the other signatures. Further, the Calendar of State Papers for 1672 makes no mention of any Turkish envoy in this country in that year. On the other hand we learn from Luttrell that the Morocco Ambassador was in England in 1682, and did enter his name “in the book as a member” of the Society. The book from which this signature is taken was then in existence, and is the only book in which signatures of like personages have been written from 1672 to the present day.

ADDRESS TO THE KING, 1682.

(Not referred to in the text.)

1682, June.—Addresses against the late Association have been presented to his Majestie from . . . the gentlemen of Lincoln's Inn.—Luttrell's Diary, i, 192.

The Association was one supposed to have been fostered by Anthony Ashley Cooper, Earl of Shaftesbury, (a Member of the Inn), against the succession of James, Duke of York, on the ground of his religion. A large number of these addresses were presented between January and October of this year.

"IMPRIMIS, It is agreed that so much of the said ground as is hereinafter particularly abutted and bounded that is to say ALL that part of the said ground from the walls of Lincoln's Inn Southwards to the rail immediately before Sir Robert Payton's Buildings running parallel with the way from Bell Yard end to Plow Stables Inn; and from the space 10 feet distance from the houses and walls on the Eastern part of the said Field, so far Westward as will run in a just parallel from North to South with the corner of the Base Court wall, and so far farther as may run in a parallel line from North to South within 8 feet of Portugal Row end" shall be dealt with as is hereinafter expressed.

Serle, or his heirs or assigns, at his or their costs, shall within three years from the date hereof build, upon the said piece of ground so bounded, three ranges of buildings, viz:—one on the east side, to extend from the south west corner of the Kitchen Garden wall on the north side of the said Field, and to run southwards to within 60 feet of Sir Robert Payton's buildings; the second row, on the west side, to begin at the north end of the present gardener's house, and to run southward to within 60 feet of the houses on the south side of the way from Bell Yard to Plow Stables, and to range with the long wall from Turnstile to the said gardener's house; the third row, on the south side of the said Field, to extend from the end of the first row on the east to the end of the second row on the west, and to range with the said houses on the south side of the way from Bell Yard to the Plow Stables, and to be 60 feet distant from such houses. "A convenient, handsome, and proportionable gate" shall be made through the east end of the said third row, "to go out under an arch to be turned for that purpose." Another gate shall be made through the north end of the second [western] row, also to go out under an arch. The buildings are to be three stories high,* and no higher, without garrets. Cellars may be made if desired. All doors are to be on the inside of the intended quadrangle.

The buildings when completed are to be made use of for chambers, for such persons as now are or hereafter shall be members of Lincoln's Inn, or such Serjeants at Law as have formerly been of the Society, and for no other purpose. They shall be liable to all manner of duties and payments and be regulated according to the "antient and ordinary Orders of the said Society," as the present chambers are; except that Serle, his heirs and assigns, shall have the sale of those chambers which shall be built on the said piece of ground, part of Little Lincoln's Inn Fields or Ficketts Fields. Assignments or nominations may be made from time to time by some deed or writing under his or their hands and seals. Persons so nominated shall be admitted by the Masters of the Bench without paying any fine to the Society, other than the usual fees to the officers of the Society and the usual fines to the House upon the surrender of chambers, namely, £10 for a ground floor or first floor chamber, £8 for a second floor, and 20 nobles [£6 13s. 4d.] for a third floor. No fine or "income" shall be payable on the first admittances. No chamber shall be liable to any commons, arrears or duties "longer than the same shall be in the possession of the person or persons who shall owe the same to this Society."

"And as to such of the said chambers as shall be built upon the ground or soil now belonging to the said Society, It is agreed . . . that the said Henry Serle shall have six several assignments for the successive lives of six several persons, to be named by the said Henry Serle, his heirs or assigns, successively, as the lives fall, without paying any fine or income to this Society for the same other than what is to be paid for the said new erected chambers on the said ground of Ficketts Fields aforesaid."

* This must mean exclusive of the basements; see below, fees on admissions.

Serle shall erect a brick wall, 10 feet high, from the south east corner of the Kitchen Garden Wall, to range equal with the eastern row of buildings, and 10 feet from the same, to extend southwards as far as the outside of the southern row, and then to return westwards to the south east corner of that row; in this last mentioned piece of the said wall there shall be a gate, sufficient for all sorts of carts and carriages.

Serle shall build a good and sufficient bog-house or house of office for the use of the Society, and a house for the gardener, between the back side of the eastern row and the above-mentioned new wall; "and that part of the same ground shall be made use of for a laystall for ever for this Society." Serle may have all the materials of the present bog-house and gardener's house, and of all walls that have to be pulled down.

Serle shall pave a sufficient quantity of ground on the outside of the western and southern rows, "for the convenient passing of people to and fro," and shall erect oak posts at convenient distances along the outside of such pavements.

The waste ground of the said parcel of ground so bounded out as aforesaid, other than that which shall be built upon as aforesaid, shall for ever lie open and unbuilt upon, "for the prospect and recreation of the said Society and members thereof."

The Inn shall not build upon the Kitchen Garden without the consent of Serle, his heirs and assigns.

The gates to be erected shall be kept by the Porters of the Society.

The three ranges of buildings, when erected, shall at all times hereafter be called by the name of SERLE COURT.

The freehold and inheritance of the said piece of ground shall remain in Serle, his heirs and assigns. Serle may build upon that portion of Little Lincoln's Inn Fields or Ficketts Fields which lies to the west of the piece now dealt with, without contradiction or disturbance by the Society..

Serle covenants to repair and maintain the bog-house, pavements, and posts, when erected; to empty the bog-house when necessary; to level the open space of the square; to repair and maintain the chambers and buildings to be built upon the Society's ground, so long as he, his heirs or assigns, shall have any estate therein, and at the expiration of his and their estates and interests therein, to leave and yield up the said chambers and buildings, well and sufficiently repaired, to the said parties of the first part, and the survivors and survivor of them, and the heirs of such survivor.

Serle agrees that these Articles shall be decreed by the Court of Chancery and confirmed by Act of Parliament.

House of Lords' MSS. ; Hist. MSS. Com., 11th Rep., App. II, 1685, June 1. Clerke v. Serle.

Petition of Sir Robert Clerke, Knight.

Sir John Birkenhead, being seized in fee of four parts of six p. 149.
and possessed for the remainder of a term of 99 years of one other sixth part of Little Lincoln's Inn Fields, appointed by his will that all his estate therein should be sold. Petitioner, with Henry Serle, agreed with the devisees to purchase, and conveyances were made to Serle in trust as to two third parts to Petitioner and D<sup>r</sup> Birkenhead. The latter afterwards assigned his third part to Serle and the Petitioner. Petitioner then sold his interest to D<sup>r</sup> Barbon for £3,000, and brought a bill against Serle, to have his moiety of the purchased premises conveyed to him, which bill was dismissed by the Lord Keeper * on 21st June, 1684. Prays that Serle, Barbon, and the other defendants, may be ordered to answer.—Lords' Journal, xiv, 25.

June 1st.—The Respondents were ordered to answer.—Lords Journal, xiv, 62.

June 10th.—Answer of Henry Serle, Esq.

The one-sixth part, held for the term of 99 years, is charged with a yearly rent of £40 for the maintenance of a free school at Calney in Wiltshire. The four fee simple parts were left by the testator to his kinsmen Randolph and Rupert Birkenhead, to be sold for payment of his debts. Respondent bought these four parts for £1242, and paid £558 more to the executors for their interest therein. The declaration of trust was given on condition that the Appellant should pay his share of the purchase money within a certain time, which he was unable to do, and so he waived and promised to deliver up the declaration. Respondent, having become sole purchaser, staked out the Fields for building but was opposed by the Society of Lincoln's Inn and several of the inhabitants. Respondent, in spite of his promise, delayed delivering up the declaration of trust, while the opposition continued, on pretence that it was mislaid or lost, and when it ceased he produced it to extort money from Respondent, after he had begun to build. The appeal is really brought by Dr. Barbon, who prosecuted the suit in Chancery in Appellant's name. Prays that the appeal may be dismissed with costs.

June 10th.—Answer of Nicholas Barbon, Doctor in Physic, and Michael Scrimshire.

Barbon mortgaged to Scrimshire his benefit of the contract, as a security for money lent him for the purchase. Serle owned that he was trustee for the Appellant, and the Respondents, having seen the declaration of trust, believed that the Appellant had a good right to his share of the Fields, nor had they ever had any notice, except from Serle, that the Appellant had agreed to waive his contract or deliver up the declaration of trust. Pray that the decree of dismissal may be reversed, and Respondents declared entitled to the benefit of the trust.

June 26th.—At the hearing, Counsel for Appellant stated that the Appellant in May, 1680, obtained a license for building on the Fields, and Cary brought a bill in Chancery to hinder him. The Judges being heard on the question whether there was an actual trust, and whether the Appellant could be compelled, by law or equity, to pay the money, Baron Atkins* said it was not within the Act of Frauds and Perjuries; it was a condition precedent. It was not a trust till the condition was performed, and the condition was not performed. Serle had no remedy to compel the Appellant to pay the money. Justice Charlton† concurred.

After due consideration had of what was offered by Counsel on either part thereupon, it is ordered and adjudged, by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled, that the said Petition and Appeal of Sir Robert Clarke be and is hereby dismissed this House; and that the Decree given in the Court of Chancery, from which he appealed, be and is hereby affirmed, except as to what concerns the remainder of the lease for 99 years of a sixth part; and further, that the Right Honourable the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England do review his Decree as to the said sixth part, and do therein as to Justice appertains.—Lords' Journal, xiv., 62.

SUIT AS TO LITTLE LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS, 1689.

(Not referred to in the text.)

House of Lords' MSS. ; Hist. MSS. Com., 12th Rep., App. VI, pp. 59-61.

1688-9, March 15. Serle v. Clerke.

Petition of Henry Serle, Esq.

Petitioner, having agreed in 1679 to purchase of Randolph and Rupert, devisees of Sir John Birkenhead, their interest, being four out of six parts, in Lincoln's Inn Little Fields, gave a declaration of trust to Sir Robert Clerke and another to one Doctor Birkenhead, agreeing to hold one-third of the four parts for each of them, as trustee, on condition of each paying one-third of the purchase money, incumbrances (if any), and all incidental charges. Clerke and Birkenhead holding back when the purchase came to be perfected, Petitioner completed it alone. Birkenhead delivered up his declaration. Clerke, though promising to do likewise, pretended his was lost ; but after Petitioner had cleared his title and improved the property, brought a bill in Chancery to be relieved on his declaration, and, pending the suit, sold his pretended title to one D<sup>r</sup> Nicholas Barebones [Barbon], who agreed to prosecute the suit in his name. The Lord Keeper North dismissed his bill, and the House of Lords affirmed the dismissal, except only as to the remainder of a lease for 99 years of one other sixth part of the Fields, touching which the Lord Keeper was to review his decree on an untrue suggestion, never stated before, that Clerke had a right to a share of that leasehold part on an alleged bill of sale made jointly to himself and Petitioner by Sir John Birkenhead's executors. Lord Keeper North having died before reviewing his decree, the Lord Chancellor Jeffreys, by colour of their Lordships' order of reference, took cognizance of extraneous matter already determined on the appeal, and committed Petitioner to the Fleet, and granted an injunction to stay his building on the Fields, because he could not produce his first title deeds, which had long been destroyed as useless, and ordered him to execute a conveyance of the leasehold part to the Six Clerks in Chancery ; and on hearing the cause touching the leasehold part in 1686, set up a title to Clerke by colour of the declaration of trust, and decreed the Six Clerks to convey to him a moiety of the leasehold premises, declaring further that a way might be found to reverse their Lordships' decree as to Petitioner's inheritance. Thereupon a bill was brought in the name of Barebones and others to set aside the Lord Keeper's decree which had been affirmed by the House, and Petitioner, who demurred on the ground that their Lordships' judgment was final, was attached for not answering. Prays that Clerke and Barebones and the other Respondents may be ordered to answer and give satisfaction for their arbitrary proceedings. [&c.]

The House gave judgment on April 19th, 1689, reversing the decree.

THE PASSAGE INTO LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS, 1700.

(Not referred to in the text.)

Journal of the House of Commons, vol. xiii.

1699 [1700], Jan. 31st.

A Petition of several Inhabitants in and about Lincoln's-Inn, Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, Chancery-Lane, and the places adjacent, was presented to the House, and read; setting forth, that the passage called Jackanapes-Alley, leading from the City of London through Chancery-Lane to Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, and places adjacent, is a thoroughfare of great resort and use, and, by daily experience, found to be inconvenient, and dangerous to all persons passing that way: And though an Act of Parliament was made in the 13th and 14th years of the reign of King Charles the Second,* to redress the same, yet, by reason no provision was therein made to purchase ground for another passage, the old passage still remains a nuisance: But there are some old buildings situate between the Sun-Coffee-House Passage and the Six Clerks Office, which the proprietors are willing to sell at reasonable rates, for making a convenient passage, and which would afford convenience for a double row of carts and coaches to pass at once between Chancery-Lane and the said Fields, and places adjacent: And praying, That leave may be given to bring in a Bill for the speedy and effectual making a convenient way out of Chancery-Lane into Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, and places adjacent, as the House shall think fit. Leave given accordingly [p. 162].

HENRY CAREY, 1717.

MSS. of the Duke of Portland, vol. 5, p. 552. *Hist. MSS. Com.*pp. 244, 248, 250.

Henry Carey to the Earl of Oxford.

Upon the 2nd of June, 1717 last ["It was sunday the seventh of July, 1717," written in margin by Lord Oxford], when your Lordship came to the Chapel at Lincoln's Inn,* it being the last Sunday in Trinity Term, and the first after your late signal deliverance from the hands of your enemies, I, being at that time Clerk of the said Chapel, set the 124th Psalm, as it is in the new version of Tate and Brady; but immediately after sermon, before I had well got out of the Chapel, many of the Seniors of the Inn gathered about me and asked me many questions, altogether frivolous, ill-natured, and ensnaring. Amongst the rest, M<sup>r</sup> Handcock distinguished himself in a more particular manner, by asking me with some austerity whether your Lordship was not my dictator; to whom I made answer (as it was true) that what I did was spontaneous, and of my own real motion, that neither your Lordship nor any other person prompted me to it, or knew anything of it beforehand. I was so pestered with the stale empty jests and pretended witticisms of the Benchers, that I withdrew, to avoid their clamour and reproaches. The Wednesday following (being the Council night), Sir Joseph Jekyll, M<sup>r</sup> Spencer Cowper, and M<sup>r</sup> Carter, then Treasurer and Chairman, began most violently and bitterly to inveigh against me, and to lay my setting that Psalm before the Bench as an offence of the highest nature, aggravating their charge with so much heat and vehemence that the Hon. John Hungerford, Esquire, and some other worthy gentlemen then present, could scarce have room to put in one word on my behalf, so loudly did these inquisitor-like censors thunder out their anathemas against me, and being much superior in number to the good few who took my part and would defend me, they passed a vote for my immediate discharge. The next morning, one of the servants of the Inn came to acquaint me that they had no further service for me, but that they had dismissed me from my clerkship for being a person disaffected to the Government; whereupon, some days after, I found myself published in the several newspapers, both foreign and domestic, so that my singing a Psalm in a private Chapel soon echoed through the four quarters of Europe, which rather made me laugh at the little endeavours of these men to disgrace me.

* Harley was admitted at Lincoln's Inn, July 25th, 1701, being then Speaker.

Thus was I dismissed from an office I had enjoyed for some years.

I was at the same time keeper of the Library in the Middle Temple, under John Troughton, Esquire, where I employed myself in regulating and reducing to decency and order a place which, through long neglect, was become a perfect chaos of paper and a wilderness of books, which were mixed and misplaced to such a degree that it was next to an impossibility to find out any particular book without tumbling over the whole. This undertaking cost me above twelve months' hard labour and pains, besides money out of my own pocket to transcribers. However, I went forward with the greater alacrity, because M<sup>r</sup> Ludlow, then Treasurer, encouraged me by repeated promises (which I now may call specious and empty) of reward when completed as now it is, I having made a new Catalogue, in five alphabets with columns (all of my own invention), of all the tracts contained in the Library, which Catalogue is in 100 sheets in folio, and the books are now so regularly ranged, and the Catalogue so plain, easy, and exact, that anybody may go directly from it to any required book or pamphlet, without any difficulty or hesitation ; so that not only the Catalogue, but even the Library itself, are evident demonstrations of my labour and instances of their ingratitude to me, who egged me on to this work without rewarding me for it.

Not long since it happened that the place of Sub-Clerk in the Temple Church became vacant, and M<sup>r</sup> Silvester, the Chief Clerk, (my friend and acquaintance), appointed me his deputy therein, whereupon I began to officiate on Sunday, the 24th of November last. After sermon, the Benchers openly rebuked M<sup>r</sup> Silvester for employing such a disaffected person, as they styled me ; upon which he was constrained to discharge me.

Now I am without all manner of employment, or hopes of obtaining any wherever the malice or power of these men can reach me ; notwithstanding, I am desirous of doing anything that is honest to support myself and my charge.

All which true narrative of the treatment and hardships put upon me, I have here most humbly submitted to your Lordship's consummate wisdom and judicious consideration, and most humbly crave leave to subscribe myself, &c.

SIR,

June 28, 1748.

- pp. 339. According to your order, I have considered of a place for the
 343. Picture, and cannot think of any better than that over the sound board in the Hall, all the advantage to be gain'd for light can only be by setting the bottom near the wall, and inclining the top forward as much as possible; it being thus inclined will make ornaments on the sides improper, so that a frame only is necessary. I have enquired of M<sup>r</sup> Gosset, a frame maker in Barwick Street, about the price of one some what in the manner of the sketch below, he believes it may come to about 30 pound guilt, to about half as much unguilt, and about five pounds less if my Lord Windham's armes are omitted. Frames may be carried up to a great expence, but he thinks one cannot be made in proportion to the picture for less.

About one in the morning broke out a terrible fire in Lincoln's Inn new square, by which No. 10 and 11 were entirely consumed, particularly the chambers of R. Wilbraham, the hon. Edward Harley, hon. Charles York, E. Hoskyns, — Chomley, Edmund Sawyer, master in chancery, and — Ansell, Esqs; all in No. 10, where the papers, books, plate, furniture, and wearing apparel were totally destroyed. The gentlemen in the next staircase, No. 11, viz. John Sharpe, solicitor to the treasury, Edward Booth, Esq; Mess. Ambler, Fazakerly, Fellers, and Wilmot, had just time to save most things of consequence. The loss and difficulties in which many families are involved, the titles to whose properties were lodged with the above gentlemen, are not to be computed. M<sup>r</sup> Wilbraham had lately purchased an estate of great value, the title deeds of which, among other numberless deeds, mortgages, &c., were burnt. His clerk, M<sup>r</sup> Pickering, lost alone 1100*l.* in money and bank notes of his own and others, and securities for 30,000*l.* more, also all the title-deeds of lord Leigh's estate. When the fire was discover'd most of the watch were asleep or drunk, and the wife of an upholder in Carey Street, whose husband left his bed to assist the sufferers, hang'd herself in his absence. [p. 287.]

July 1st.

The Lord Chancellor suspended all proceedings in Chancery on account of the late fire in Lincoln's Inn square. [p. 333.]

August 1st.

The rubbish in Lincoln's Inn square having been sifted, most of the sufferers by the late fire have had the chief part of their properties in plate and cash, restored to them, and M<sup>r</sup> Pickering, who lost bank notes to the amount of 1100*l.*, has been so successful as to re-establish most of them. ## TANCRED'S BEQUEST.

Annual Register, 1763, p. 55.

pp. 357, 371, etc. Feb. 3rd. Christopher Tancred, of Whixley in Yorkshire, Esq., lately deceased, having bequeathed £50 annually apiece, to four young students of Lincoln's Inn (of which he was formerly a Bencher*) till they should be called to the Bar, and for three years after they became Barristers; Edward Reeve, Esq., student of that Inn, made an elegant Latin speech in Lincoln's Inn Hall, before that Honourable Society, in commemoration of so deserving a benefactor.

NOTE XXVII.

LIABILITY OF THE INN TO RATES.

House of Commons' Journal, vol. xxxiv.

1774, Jan. 26th.

pp. 417, 418, 419, 426. A Petition of George Lewis Newnham, Levett Blackborne, John Coxe, Walter Long, John Parry, and John Madocks, Esquires, on behalf of themselves and the rest of the Benchers of the Society of Lincoln's Inn, in the County of Middlesex, was presented to the House, and read; Setting forth, That Lincoln's Inn is one of the four Inns of Court, and hath been for time immemorial, and now is, a Society intrusted with the education of young gentlemen studying the Law, and with the power of admitting them to practise the same; and hath accordingly been always governed and regulated by the Benchers of the said Society; and that the lands and tenements, and other estates of the said Society, have from time to time belonged, and now do belong, to the Members of the said Society, or some of them; and that the said Society have always considered themselves as having no concern with any Parish or Parishes whatsoever, either with respect to bearing any Parochial burthens, or deriving to themselves any parochial benefit; and now do, and always have, paved, lighted, watched and cleansed, the said Inn, within the limits and bounds thereof, at their own expence ; and also relieved all their members, officers and servants, when they have been unable to provide for themselves ; and that the said Society, with the Inns of Chancery (Members thereof) have always been considered by the Legislature, particularly in the Land Tax and Window Tax Acts, as a separate Body, and as such they proportion and raise those Taxes among themselves ; and that a claim has been lately made by the Parish of Saint Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, upon part of the said Society, to make the same contributory to the Poor's Tax of the said Parish, not only by charging it thereto as part of the said Parish, but also rating every Chamber as a separate Messuage ; by which attempt not only a new and heavy burthen is laid upon the said Society, but, in consequence thereof, the Members may be called upon and made to serve Parochial and other Offices, inconsistent with, and intirely subversive of, their original design and institution ; and therefore, that the declaring the Members of the said Society, and the lands and tenements within the limits and bounds thereof, not to be liable to Parochial duties or burthens, would tend to the great ease and benefit of the said Society, and is highly necessary to their establishment as a Society, and cannot be injurious to any Parish, no Parish having heretofore been able to subject the Members or the estates of the said Society to any Parochial burthens ; nor hath the same been attempted till very lately, and more especially as the Petitioners disclaim all parochial benefits, and undertake to maintain their own Poor : and therefore praying that leave may be given to bring in a Bill for the purposes aforesaid, or to give the Petitioners such other relief as the House shall think fit.

Ordered, That the said Petition be referred to the consideration of the Committee, to whom the Petition of the Society of Gray's Inn is referred : And that they do examine, and state to the House, the matter of fact contained in this Petition. [p. 414.]

1774, Feb. 1st.

Petitions in opposition, from the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the Parish of S. Clement Danes, from the Governors and Directors of the Poor of the United Parishes of S. Andrew Holborn, above the Bars, and S. George the Martyr, and from the Committee for Paving, etc., the Parish of S. Clement Danes, were read, and ordered to lie on the Table. [pp. 426, 427.]

1774, Feb. 8th.

Report of the Committee.

M<sup>r</sup> Thomas Grint informed your Committee, that Lincoln's Inn is a Society entrusted with the education of young gentlemen studying the Law, and is regulated and governed by the Benchers thereof.

That every member of the Society inhabiting chambers in Serle's Court, is admitted during life, paying a certain fine and fees to the Society, which are called freeholds, subject to the Orders and Regulations of the Bench ; and that they all belong to members of the Society who never paid any Parochial Rate.

That the witness has known a perambulation of the Parish of Saint Andrew, Holborn, and the perambulators have come into the district of Lincoln's Inn, claimed by the Society ; that the last time the Parish went this perambulation was in the year 1771, and the witness believes they went in the customary mode of perambulating Parishes.

That the Society have no particular fund for the support of the poor, except the general fund of the House ; that no Poor's Rates are collected, and that there are no Churchwardens, Overseers of the Poor, or Constables, nor any officer to whom a Justice of the Peace might direct his warrant.

That there is a Chapel belonging to the Society, but the witness never knew any children christened there ; that marriages have been performed in the Chapel before the late Act of Parliament for preventing clandestine marriages, but none since ; that there is a burial place for those who die within the limits of the Society, but no burial fees are paid to the Parish, and he never heard that the Minister of the Parish claimed any fees.

Being asked how many Inns are claimed by the Society of Lincoln's Inn, he said : Only one now, Thaive's Inn being sold, which is become separate property from the Society ; and he apprehends they have the same power of alienating Furnival's Inn, and the district of Lincoln's Inn.

That the witness knows of no children being born in Lincoln's Inn, no families living there, and never knew of any children being dropped there.*

That the Preacher and Reader belonging to the Society, are paid by the Benchers, and the Sacrament is administered every month ; that there is a Register of Burials kept there ; and the witness never heard that any pew or gallery in the churches of Saint Clement Danes or Saint Andrew's, Holborn, was appropriated for the use of the Society of Lincoln's Inn.

That the limits and bounds of the Inn are lighted, watched, and cleansed, by the direction and at the expence of the Benchers.

* A considerable number of children were dropped in the Inn at different times. See ante, pp. 357, 419.

That persons belonging to the Society have many times been relieved by the Benchers out of the General Fund of the Society ; and that one Isaac Johnson, a superannuated porter, at this time receives two shillings a week, but he is the only person at present who receives a weekly allowance, and that it was a voluntary act of the Benchers ; that other persons have sometimes received five or ten guineas at a time ; and the witness never knew any of the officers or servants of the Inn applying for relief and being refused.

That no person has ever been returned upon the Society from any Parish as a pauper having gained a settlement, and the witness knows no instance of any person gaining relief from a settlement there.

That no persons are permitted to reside within the district of Lincoln's Inn, but what are of the Society ; that the Stamp Office is within the district, but the servants employed there do not live in the Inn, except the housekeeper, who is not a member.

That the Commissioners of the Stamp Office pay dues to the Society for the House, and many of the Chambers are purchased by the Crown, for the use of the Stamp Office, in the names of some of the members of the Inn, and whenever they drop, they apply for a fresh nominee, that being the terms they are held upon ; that they are obliged to hold them in the name of a member of Lincoln's Inn, and the Commissioners have been charged with part of the Fund. And being asked, whether there is any legal process of enforcing payment of their share towards this Fund ? he said, all persons who are admitted give bond for securing the payment of it ; and that no rate is paid by them to the Parish of Saint Andrew's, Holborn ; that this Fund is assessed upon the members who are admitted to the chambers, and made out in their names, and paid annually by the Commissioners, in the names of those gentlemen who are admitted to the chambers.

Being asked, whether he ever knew of any charge or demand being made by the Parish of Saint Clement Danes or Saint Andrew's Holborn, relative to the Paving Rate ? he said, There was, in the year 1771 or 1772* ; that he could not recollect the sum exactly, but believed it was about £25 2s. 6d. and apprehended it was laid for Serle Street and Carey Street ; that the answer of the Benchers to this demand was, That it should be collected and paid by the occupiers of those chambers on the west and south sides of Serle's Court, exclusive of the annual dues paid to the House.

That the Gates of the Inn are shut at eleven o'clock every night, and he never knew the Constable of the Night, or Watchman, demand an entrance for search of vagrants, or exercise any jurisdiction in the Inn after the gates were once shut ; neither did he ever know the Parochial Beadles come into the Inn in the day time to take up vagrants or beggars, to remove them into other parts of the Parish.

That he was appointed one of the Assessors of the Land and Window Tax by the Benchers, and collects the same in Serle's Court, as part of the Inn ; and he produced to your Committee the Books of Assessment on Lincoln's Inn, in the years 1740 and 1748, for the Land and Window Taxes. Then

An Act, made in the last Session of Parliament, for granting an Aid to His Majesty by a Land Tax was read ; whereby it appeared, that the said Society have been considered by the Legislature as a separate Body, and are taxed accordingly.

The witness further informed your Committee, That the Society of Lincoln's Inn collected the Land Tax for Thaive's Inn, under the Act of Parliament ; but that none is collected by them for that place now ; and that hitherto the sum collected upon Thaive's Inn has been paid out of the Fund of Lincoln's Inn, according to the Act of Parliament ; and that that sum must be paid by the said Society.

That he has heard of a claim being made within these six months, by the Parish of Saint Clement Danes, upon the Society of Lincoln's Inn ; but never heard, till very lately, of any of those chambers being taxed to the Poors Rates.

M<sup>r</sup> Robert Pardoe informed your Committee, That there was a claim lately made on the Society of Lincoln's Inn, by the Parish of Saint Clement Danes, and four gentlemen of the Inn were summoned before the Justices, to shew cause why the Poor's Rate should not be paid :—That he attended with those gentlemen upon the Justices ; and, by Order of the Benchers, told them that gentlemen of the Inn did mean to dispute their right of taxing them, and therefore they might come and distrain upon one or two gentlemen, and the Society would try their right ; accordingly distress was made ; upon which, notice was given of bringing an action to try this right, but no action has been brought.

M<sup>r</sup> Grint, being further examined, said, He could not tell what burthen it would be to the gentlemen of Lincoln's Inn, to bear Parochial Offices ; but has heard, that Students at Law, practising, are exempt from Parochial Offices ; and that there are members of the Society, who live out of the Inn, and rent houses, and pay Parochial Duties.

That he looks upon this Tax to be a new one, and if it is laid it will be a great hardship ; and should any of the gentlemen in Lincoln's Inn be appointed Parish Officers, it will be an exceeding great hardship upon them.

[The various Petitions against the application were re-read. It was moved and carried that the said Petitioners be not heard, either by themselves or Counsel, in support of their Petitions.]

Ordered, that leave be given to bring in a Bill declaring the Society of Lincoln's Inn, and their lands and tenements within the limits and bounds thereof, in the County of Middlesex, not to be liable to Parochial duties or burthens: And that M<sup>r</sup> Gray, M<sup>r</sup> Wallace, M<sup>r</sup> Popham, M<sup>r</sup> Solicitor General [Wedderburn], and M<sup>r</sup> Skynner, do prepare, and bring in the same. [pp. 444, 445.]

1774, Feb. 15th.

M<sup>r</sup> Solicitor General presented the Bill, which was read a first time. [p. 456.]

1774, Feb. 16th.

Petitions from the Governors and Directors of the Poor of the United Parishes of Saint Andrew, Holborn, above the Bars, and Saint George the Martyr, from the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the Parish of Saint Clement Danes, and from the Committee for Paving, etc., in the same Parish, against the Bill, were read, and ordered to lie upon the Table until the Bill be read a second time, when Counsel may be heard on both sides. [pp. 461, 462.]

1774, March 10th.

Ordered that the Bill be read a second time this day six months. [p. 551.]

Dec. 8th.

Annual Register, 1774, p. 169.

On Tuesday a cause was tried in the Court of King's Bench, before Lord Mansfield, wherein the Parish of Saint Clement Danes were Plaintiffs, and a part of the Society of Lincoln's Inn Defendants, on an action brought against the latter, for refusing to pay the poor's rates; when, after a hearing of above five hours, a verdict was given in favour of the parish, with all costs of suit.

The Six Clerks' Office.

1775, March 16th.

Ordered that leave be given to bring in a Bill for applying the funds provided for rebuilding the Offices of the Six Clerks of the King's Court of Chancery, by an Act made in the 14th year of the Reign of his present Majesty, intituled, "An Act for rebuilding the Office of the Six Clerks of the King's Court of Chancery, and for erecting Offices for the Register and Accountant General of the said Court, for the better preserving the records, decrees, orders, and books of account, kept in such Offices," in building Offices for the said Six Clerks in the Garden of Lincoln's Inn, instead of rebuilding the present Six Clerks Office in Chancery Lane ; and for other purposes. [p. 201.]

1775, April 12th.

Mr Solicitor General presented the Bill, which was read a first time. [p. 302.]

1775, May 8th.

A Petition of several proprietors of chambers in Garden Row, Lincoln's Inn, in the County of Middlesex, on behalf of themselves and other proprietors of chambers in the said Row, was presented to the House, and read; Setting forth, That the Petitioners are owners of certain chambers in Lincoln's Inn, adjoining to the Garden, for term of life, the reversion in fee belonging to the Society of the said Inn; and that it hath been usual for the Benchers of the said Society, whenever any of the said chambers became vacant by the death of a proprietor, to grant out the same again to some member of the said Society, for the term of his life, and to demand and receive a considerable additional price for the same, in preference to other chambers belonging to the said Society of equal goodness, on account of their contiguity to the Garden; and that in consequence of an Act, passed in this present session of Parliament, the said Benchers have sold, for a considerable sum of money, part of the said Garden, for the purpose of erecting Public Offices, for the use of the Register and Accountant General of the Court of Chancery, opposite and very near to the Petitioners' chambers, without making them any satisfaction for the injury done to the Petitioners, although such buildings will render their chambers of small value, and the large additional price which hath been paid by the Petitioners for their situation will be entirely lost; and that the Petitioners, conceiving that the said Act might be highly injurious to their property, had determined to apply to the House for relief, but were induced to desist therefrom, by assurances given from many of the said Benchers, that full satisfaction should be made to the Petitioners for any injury that should arise to them therefrom; but the Petitioners have never been able to obtain any relief in the premises; and taking notice of the Bill for applying the funds provided for rebuilding the Offices of the Six Clerks of the King's Court of Chancery, by an Act made in the 14th year of the reign of his present Majesty intituled [etc.]; by which Bill, the said Benchers are empowered to sell, for a considerable sum of money, another part of the said Garden, contiguous to the Petitioners' chambers, for the purpose of erecting a large Public Office for the Six Clerks of the Court of Chancery, which will be a further injury to the Petitioners' property ; yet the Petitioners have great reason to apprehend that no satisfaction is intended to be made to them, although the Petitioners are informed, that the said Benchers have insisted upon, and are to receive, a considerable additional price for their land, in consideration of the damage that will be done to the Petitioners' chambers by the proposed building: And therefore praying that provision may be made in the said Bill, for making satisfaction to the Petitioners for the damage they will sustain by such building, out of the money to be paid for the purchase of such part of the said Garden as aforesaid; or that they may be heard, by themselves or Counsel, in relation thereto, and have such other relief as to the House shall seem meet.

The Bill was read a second time, and committed to the whole house. The Petitioners may then be heard by themselves or by their Counsel. [p. 356.]

1775, May 15th.

The Bill was considered in Committee, and several amendments made. [p. 377.]

1775, May 16th.

The Bill was reported, and ordered to be ingrossed. [p. 378.]

1775, May 17th.

Read a third time, and sent to the Lords. [p. 380.]

1775, May 22nd.

Passed the Lords, without amendment. [p. 391.]
